Promise of western coal boom turning into a bust

By Steven Rattner
(c) New York Times

Gillette, Wyo. — For a year the giant earthmovers that are carving out five mammoth coal mines from endless acres of scrubland in the heart of the coal country here in Campbell County were silenced as a suit by environmentalists worked its way through the courts.

Now the suit has been settled, the mines are nearing completion and, although initial production seems assured, no one is quite sure what will happen next.

The bloom is off western coal. Three years after a post-oil embargo energy frenzy sent coal prices skyrocketing, development work on nearly half the nation's coal reserves — more than 200 billion tons — here in the Powder River Basin and in neighboring states seems to have slowed below the most pessimistic predictions of 1974.

Slowdown Factors

Several factors are blamed for the slowdown. Environmental lawsuits have impeded work not only on the five mines here, but on a rail line to bring the coal out and on a variety of other coal-rated projects. With oil still plentiful, demand for coal remains sluggish as electric utilities resist conversions. Transportation continues to be uncertain and expensive, railroads grow more congested and a proposed coal pipeline project had been shelved. More exotic projects, such as coal gasification, appear farther and farther out of reach.

"Utilities don't believe they have to convert to coal or they are putting it off for as long as possible," said William S. Cook, executive vice president of the Union Pacific Corp., which has major western coal reserves. "And with a new administration, they're adopting a wait-and-see attitude." Cook said new contracts for coal have slowed to a virtual standstill.

Nothing in budget

Despite campaign statements, President Carter has not produced any help for western coal. A new, tough strip mining bill should clear Congress this year, with help from the White House, perhaps shifting the economics somewhat in favor of deep-mine eastern sources.

The Interior Dept. planned to resume coal leasing in 1977 — the moratorium has been an industry peeve — but with postponements ordered for a number of oil leases in recent weeks, the resumption appears far from assured. Last week's budget amendments, while aiding conservation and hindering nuclear power, apparently did nothing for coal.

To be sure, many of these factors have contributed to a general slowdown in coal development across the country. One indication of the fortunes of coal might be the spot market. In September 1973, the Federal Power Commission (FPC) reported, steam coal for electric utilities sold for $10.67 a ton. Prices peaked in November 1974 at $31.95 a ton and, by last August, had fallen sharply to $21.35 a ton.

Coal production in all regions of the United States climbed only slightly last year, to 665 million tons from 648 million tons, according to the National Coal Assn. Low-sulfur western coal, once billed as the solution to America's energy problems but thus far unable to produce the growth expected of it, amounted to only about 90 million tons last year. Earlier projections of 300 million tons of production by 1985 have now been cut to about 200 million.

Transportation problem

A big impediment to the development of western coal, experts agree, is transportation. Railroads, expected to carry most of the coal, at least over the short-term, may not be able to handle the burden. The Burlington Northern wants to build a 116-mile line through the Powder River basin here where the new giant mines are, but the line's prospects are uncertain because of a legal challenge by the Sierra Club to the Interstate Commerce Commission's approval of the project. If completed, the $1 billion line would represent the longest new line built in the United States since 1931.

Then there are the experts who question whether, even without regulatory impediments, the railroads are up to the task of hauling the coal. A fairly typical assessment of the problem came in late December when the Electric Power Research Institute released a study suggesting that, by 1985, bottlenecks on both railroads and inland waterways — which are handling a significant amount of coal barge traffic — may develop.

Slurry pipeline woes

For example, "Some of the utilities from time to time indicated a general concern about the Burlington Northern," said Gale Daniel, vice president of Arco's Thunder Basin Coal Co. "Even now, the BN will need a lot of improvements to stay up with the business coming out of the area."

The railroads dispute this. "Can we move all the coal that has to be moved?" Norman Lorentzsen, president of the Burlington Northern Co. asked rhetorically. "The answer is yes."

Another possible coal-hauler, a slurry pipeline, has been proposed to run from here to Arkansas, but even its supporters acknowledge its future appears dim. The railroads have refused to give it permission to cross their tracks and have blocked attempts by slurry proponents to win the right of eminent domain in Congress for the lines.

Looking further ahead, analysts feel the use of western coal can be made most efficient by gasifying it or turning it into electricity via mammoth mine-mouth power plants.

But the timetable for commercial gasification is being steadily pushed back as costs escalate sharply. Congress last year killed a potentially major federal effort to aid development of gasification and other synthetics. In addition, interest in private gasification projects appears to be shifting from the west to the east as a result of the western water problem and the more forceful opposition to development there.

The prospects for on-site electrical plant — "coal by wire" are equally uncertain. Last year, the most prominent proposal, for a giant complex on the Kaiparowitz Plateau in Utah, was dropped due to pressure from environmentalists.

Arizona Hallelujah People, old devil feud over gold mine—sort of

By Jules Loh

Octave, Ariz. (AP) — On the wall of the house trailer parked near the old gold mine is a sign: "By my spirit sayeth the Lord. Hallelujah!" On the counter beneath are two boxes of rifle bullets.

Praise the Lord and pass the ammunition.

"When we armed ourselves," said Brother Jack, wrestling an antique truck up a mountain road so rugged his pistol almost bounced off the dashboard, "that old devil and his army stopped being as obnoxious with their guns."

That old devil is a miner named C.O. Carlson, who isn't talking these days, not to strangers, and especially not to Brother Jack. His army consists of three hired guns, one of them called locally "the fat frog."

Brother Jack is the Rev. Jack Oliphant, shepherd of a flock of renovated miscreants known as the Hallelujah People. By leading them to Jesus, said one of them, a former junkie, Brother Jack shows the path "from the guttermost to the uttermost."

The feud is over a gold mine — sort of.

It is as bizarre a story as anything out of Zane Grey, who also might have selected the setting.

Octave, a mining camp where prospectors once picked up nuggets as big as turkey eggs, and spilled blood over them, is a ghost town. It is 20 miles from a paved road in desert so hostile the upraised arms of the saguaro cactus seem to be pleading for rain.

But the bullets are real, and Brother Jack sure wishes they would cease firing so he can get on with his grand plan. He aims to build a lake out here, pumping water from the old mine shafts, and to plant a vineyard for the Hallelujah People to labor in, and resurrect a city.

Holy Ghost town

"It will become a Holy Ghost town," he said.

Brother Jack is a husky, 53-year-old preacher who came to the ministry late, he said, after a life of evil. He has great bushy eyebrows, a booming voice, wears patched jeans and, at times lately, a pistol holster.

He led his Hallelujah People into the desert here last December. There are 42 of them, plus about a dozen hallelujah dogs, occupying a ramshackle camp of trailers and buses and renovated mine buildings.

They drove here from Tampa, Fla., where they grew oranges and where Brother Jack got hold of 200,000 shares of 50-cent stock, a gift, in a company called the Rhenium Corp., purported owner of the Octave mine, abandoned since 1936.

AP Wirephoto

Brother Jack Oliphant, credited with leading his followers from "the guttermost to the uttermost," discusses the feud over a gold mine between his Hallelujah People and C.O. Carlson, an Octave, Ariz., miner.

On arriving they found Carlson living in a trailer at the entrance to the mine road. Carlson has since barricaded the road, requiring the Hallelujah People to use boulder-strewn alternatives, trails really. Carlson also claims a portion of ownership in the mine, but that apparently isn't the source of the quarrel.

In fact they were friends at first. Carlson wanted a rock-crushing mill built nearby; Hallelujah Boys hired out their labor.

Meanwhile, Brother Jack met another local homesteader, Al Haynes, a traveling carnival concessionaire out doing a little prospecting in the off season.

Haynes and Brother Jack went partners, rigged up a sluice about a mile away at Weaver Gulch, which is not on the Octave property, and started panning.

Hallelujah. Gold.

"That's what I think is at root of all this," Brother Jack said. "All of a sudden Carlson wanted us out of here, me, Al, everybody. The gold is the only way I can explain it."

In any event, at Brother Jack's New Year's communion service three men showed up toting guns.

The men later told an Arizona reporter they were hired by Carlson, that they had been shot at, had shot back, had been threatened with dynamite, and had caught Hallelujah Boys trying to steal equipment.

The way Brother Jack tells it, all the shooting has been from the Carlson camp. Except once.

"They burned a cross one night on that ridge over there," he said, "and I did rake the ridge with my .22 rifle, yes I did." He also said he threatened to do the same thing when three armed men met him at a turn in the road, which had been blocked.

For that threat, Brother Jack is to be arraigned Monday.

Litany of complaints

He says he is not worried because God will protect him, being in the right, and wonders why he can't get similar legal action for his own litany of complaints. He has told the sheriff about them, Lord knows.

They include a pistol whipping, a shot through his truck door — a hole is definitely there — a shot aimed at a dog that almost hit a baby, and assorted other misdeeds that have led him to fence his camp with barbed wire and combine prayer walks with sentry duty at night.

Yavapai County Sheriff Curly Moore, for his part, says "That thing's gotten so buggy buggy I've assigned my chief deputy to it." The deputy shrugs. "Upon investigating, I have found a lack of witnesses. I think it's a civil matter."

There the Octave mine war stands.

One thing else. The deputy said he has, upon investigating, found something that might be a criminal matter after all and he is keeping his eye on it.

Some Hallelujah Boys opened up an old mine shaft, which had been sealed, just enough to get a whiff of a curious odor.

"There's a possibility a body is down there," the deputy said.

Dust weather impact theory is disproved

Washington (UPI) — Measurements taken by government scientists disprove the theory that a thickening layer of man-made atmospheric dust is causing a global cooling trend, the National Weather Service said Saturday.

Some experts have theorized that particles in the atmosphere are increasing because of human activity and pollution, and said this dust may be reflecting and scattering sunlight back to space and away from the earth — causing a worldwide cooling trend.

But scientists at the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) now say their findings disprove that explanation for the unusually cold winter weather which occurred this year in the eastern United States.

Dr. Kirby Hanson, who directs an NOAA climate-monitoring program, said instrument measurements at Mauna Loa, Hawaii, show no long-term change in the amount of small particles suspended in the atmosphere.

The NOAA data, based on 19 years of measurements, "suggest that human activities are not increasing the concentration of solid particles in the atmosphere at this location," a spokesman said.

"Since the Mauna Loa measurements are believed to be representative of other clean-air locations around the globe, NOAA scientists see no long-term increase in the quantity of atmospheric particles in most of the Earth's atmosphere."

Hanson said regional increases in particle levels are seen in areas "heavily impacted by atmospheric particles from industry, dust storms and other major sources."

But the agency's Mauna Loa observatory is 11,200 feet above sea level and isolated from "major regionally significant sources of atmospheric dust."

He said measurements there indicate there has been no increase on a global basis.

"In general, this tends to contradict the theory that human activities are interfering" with worldwide weather patterns, Kirby said in a telephone interview at his Boulder, Colo., office.

"There is no indication of it (atmospheric dust) increasing on a global basis. We're fully aware that there are smaller regions of the earth" where dust is increasing, he said, but that would not necessarily have an effect on temperatures around the world.

Watson coordinating drouth aid

Camp David, Md. (UPI) — President Carter announced Saturday White House aide Jack Watson will serve as coordinator of the federal drouth assistance program.

He also requested information from governors regarding the impact of the drouth in their states.

Carter said a special drouth assistance group has been formed to receive information from the governors of affected states in the West with respect to their particular situations.

In addition, he said heads of federal agencies and departments have been ordered to review assistance programs "to insure that all appropriate assistance is made available fairly and rapidly."

He said a special staff group has been formed with the membership including White House aides, officials of the budget bureau and federal agencies as well as the staff of appropriate congressional committees, to assist in evaluating drouth reports and to monitor day-to-day activities in the states to help resolve some of the problems.

Federal regional officials also will be involved in the new crash drouth assistance program.

Policy board puts off sugar import decision

Washington (AP) — Carter administration officials postponed a decision Saturday on steps to aid the nation's ailing sugar industry, including possible tightened import quotas that would raise prices for consumers.

The Economic Policy Board, an advisory group to President Carter, decided that no recommendations should be sent to the White House until the U.S. International Trade Commission completes a parallel study on the domestic impact of sugar imports.

The trade commission is scheduled to vote Thursday on whether sugar imports have damaged or threatened to harm American sugar producers, but its final report and recommendations to the President may not come until mid-March.

Agriculture Secretary Bob S. Bergland, a member of the Economic Policy Board, said he had hoped for swifter action by the commission. A week's delay is "of no great import," but a month's delay could be worrisome because it could cause a delay in settlement of several major sugar contracts now under negotiation, he said.

The Economic Policy Board reported it was [illegible] about the foreign policy problems and the higher costs to U.S. consumers that could result from import restrictions on sugar. Each penny-a-pound increase in sugar prices is estimated to cost American shoppers $225 million a year.

U.S. sugar producers last week received [illegible] cents a pound for their product, but their production cost is 15 cents a pound.

For 40 years, the Sugar Act protected U.S. growers of sugar cane and sugar beets with high tariffs on imported sugar. But the law expired on Jan. 1, 1975, after Congress refused to extend it during a time of record-high sugar prices.

Psst . . . wanna talk to main man?

Washington (UPI) — Remember this telephone number 900-242-1611 It could come in handy in a week

Dialing that toll free number Saturday will link you to a computer that will channel telephone calls to the White House during the two-hour "Ask President Carter" phone-in program on the CBS Radio Network

Special Presidential Assistant Barry Jagoda said the computer-run telephone system will involve hundreds of substations funneling calls to 10 regional switching centers

From there the calls will be channeled into 20 White House telephone lines manned by CBS personnel, who volunteered to broadcast and pay for the program

Jagoda said CBS switchboard personnel will get the name and telephone number of the caller verify it through directory assistance and then return the listener s call

The calls will be returned in chronological order ' Jagoda said

Walter Cronkite will be narrator

There was no way to estimate how many calls Carter will receive, Jagoda said adding ' The volume is not as significant as the fact that millions of people will be able to hear ' the answers

Jagoda said it was hoped the questions will represent the kinds of questions that are on the minds of the people '

CBS he said "will maintain editorial control" of the show but calls will not be screened for content There will be the normal seven-second delay to prevent any obscene calls from being aired, Jagoda said

Despite efforts to keep respirator running

Stepfather to be charged in child's death

Wichita, Kan (UPI) — Officials said Saturday Herbert Smith Jr will be charged with the death of his 19-month-old stepdaughter, despite his efforts to keep her legally alive

The child, Janeen House, had been in a respirator since Jan 31 She went into a coma after allegedly being beaten by Smith two months after Smith and her mother were married

Smith later tried to get a court order prohibiting doctors from disconnecting the respirator but Associate District Judge Ray Hodge Friday said the child had suffered brain damage, could not breathe on her own and was "legally and medically dead"

In handing down his ruling, Hodge said Smith s request was an attempt by the plaintiff to artificially sustain the life of a both medically and legally dead child to avoid the consequences of possibly more severe criminal charges and related prosecution "

Asst District Attorney Roger Skinner said the original charge against Smith — child abuse — would be amended Monday to homicide, involuntary manslaughter or first-degree murder

I've got several people I have to interview yet," Skinner said "I'll make a determination on what degree of homicide to be filed by Monday morning '

The girl's mother, Mrs Yvonne House Smith six physicians and the Wesley Medical Center asked Hodge for permission to turn off the life-support system Hodge ordered physicians to turn the respirator off for three minutes to see if the child could breathe on her own

When she could not, the judge left the decision on turning off the respirator permanently up to the mother and the doctors They decided it should be turned off

Waco Tex (AP) — When the two teen agers left their south Texas home, they had only the clothes on their backs, two ounces of marijuana and two suitcases — stuffed with nearly $500 000 in cash

Thus equipped for a trip to Chicago they launched a bizarre, often comical two-day spending spree It ended in the Waco jail drunk tank where a prostitute offered to marry them

The Alice Tex high school sophomores Dean Bridges, 15 and Percy Garcia 16 say they dug up the cash from a hiding place on Bridges father s ranch and found that with $500 000 you can

Pay a bellboy $3,000 to buy a 1977 Thunderbird for $8 000 in cash and drive it off a Dallas showroom floor

Give $100 gifts to winos and $20 tips to waiters

Stay at a downtown Dallas Hotel and go on shopping sprees to buy cameras clothes and stereo equipment

The money, in $20 $50 and $100 bills now sits in a Waco bank while a grand jury investigates its source The car, with less than 500 miles on it, is gathering dust in the McLennan County garage

Dad goes to jail

Bridges father, James Hiroms (Bridges uses his stepfather s name) a welder and racehorse owner went to jail in Alice on Thursday rather than testify about the origin of the money which south Texas law enforcement officers believe is related to drug smuggling

Nobody keeps that kind of money around here for groceries said one officer explaining that Alice is at the crossroads of northbound marijuana pipelines from Mexico

Bridges attorneys have filed a formal claim for the cash and Garcia s attorneys say they might claim it The Internal Revenue Service has filed a $300 000 lien

I want to drive that car out of the garage " Bridges said as he brushed dust from the blue auto I ve got a good lawyer I think I ve got a good chance to get it

The slender shy Bridges said he had known for five months that something valuable — maybe money — was buried on his father s barren dusty ranch near Alice in a quail pen guarded by two doberman pinschers and Satan a vicious German shepherd attack dog

Looked out window

I seen somebody bury it there Bridges said I looked out my window from my room one night at dusk and watched him

Bridges said that after a fight with his father Jan 29 he decided to get whatever was buried there and ' get as far away from Alice as we could '

Bridges said he easily pacified the dogs and dug for the money with Garcia a former high school football player and another teen-ager John Rose

We were going crazy throwing up dirt until Percy threw his pick down there and hit something said Bridges We were jumping around and yelling You hit it! You hit it! We struck it rich!"

The money was in $10 000 packets in a red ice chest Garcia said a piece of notebook paper with ' 500 000 scrawled on it was the first thing he saw when he opened the chest

My first thought was to get a car and go as far away from Texas as we could added Bridges

Wow! wow! wow!

All I could say was Wow! said Garcia ' I just kept saying it

The cash wouldn't fit into one big suitcase "It was so heavy the handle broke and the suitcase fell in the mud," said Bridges

The youths gave Rose $4,000, stuffed their jeans with handfuls of bills and lugged the two suitcases of cash to the bus station

Bridges had crammed his father s 9mm automatic pistol in his underwear where it kept slipping down his leg and Garcia left his mother a note saying he'd be back soon

The teen-agers nearly lost the money twice, they said

"We were drunk We just got off the bus and left the $500,000 on it," said Bridges The suitcases were still there when they reboarded

After arriving at a Dallas hotel, Bridges and Garcia filled their pockets with about $6,000 each and left for a shopping trip They shoved the money-filled suitcases under their bed and left about $2 in change on a table

"When we got back, we found out the maid had stole the change," said Bridges ' There was half a million dollars in cash under the bed "

Both boys have been suspended from school for truancy Garcia is living with his parents Bridges lives with his mother and stepfather in Robstown, near Alice

One Los Angeles-based movie producer said the boys will make a profit "in six figures" for the rights to their story

"I just want to get my money out of the bank and my car out of the garage," said Bridges

Susan Clough

Carter's secretary efficient

By Mike Feinsilber

Washington (UPI) — Susan Clough was 20, divorced, with two infants to support, in need of a job. She enrolled in a typing class.

Now, 12 years later, she does her typing for Jimmy Carter — as his personal secretary.

Blonde, with sparkling blue-green eyes and a smile to match, Mrs. Clough first landed a clerk-typing job at Ft. Bragg, N.C., then went to a law office in Atlanta.

A senior partner in the firm helped her land a job in Gov. Jimmy Carter's office. When Carter left she stayed on to work for Gov. George Busbee as a speech writer.

In September, as he was starting his campaign, Carter telephoned:

"Susan, I need you."

She helped with his correspondence, then on Jan. 21 moved into a cozy, sunny office a step outside the Oval Office and within hailing distance of the small study where Carter does most of his desk work.

Phone rarely stops

In her office, a radio is tuned to a classical music station. The bookshelves are empty — except for "Bartlett's Familiar Quotations," a government manual, and "The Secretary's Handbook." The phone rarely stops buzzing.

Mrs. Clough types for Carter, drafts replies to some of his mail, advises administration newcomers how he likes memos prepared.

The "blooming telephone," she says, won't let go. One day she carried a lunch tray from the White House mess to her desk. By time she got around to eating, her ice cream sundae was a gooey mess.

Mrs. Clough says in a month's time in vocational school she learned to type so fast that she has to slow down to keep keys from jamming on her electric typewriter.

She learned enough shorthand to get by. A president rarely has reason to dictate letters; they are drafted for him by others.

Mrs. Clough (rhymes with "plow"), says she is determined not to be overwhelmed by where she works. And she refuses to submerge her personality.

"It's easy to be carried away by a feeling of self-importance," she says. "I'm not going to do it. Every time I've had occasion to bask in glory, something's happened, some humbling experience."

She sees to it that there's more to life than a typewriter and that incessant telephone.

She plays tennis, chess, bridge, backgammon. She backpacks, hikes, swims, sails, canoes and goes deep-sea fishing.

She's played the piano since she was 5 and has taken up the classical guitar. She wants to learn to ski.

MENSA member

She sews nearly all her own clothes and her daughter's. She was admitted to membership in MENSA, the brainy organization which accepts only 2% of the population — those who reach its stringent I.Q. standards.

For relaxation she reads novels — lots of them. On a weekend, she says, she can go through six. In an evening, she'll start and finish two.

Her daughter, Carol, 13, has stayed in Atlanta to finish the year at the Westminster School, where she is on full scholarship.

Son Doug, 14, who at 6-feet-2 towers over her, came north with his mother. They live in a rented house in nearby Maryland.

Mrs. Clough has given a lot of thought to organizing time. She hates to waste a minute. She separates papers into two piles — those she must concentrate on, and those she can deal with while talking on the phone.

Let voters make decision

The time has come for Nebraska to curb the ability of school districts to undertake major building programs without a prior approving vote of citizens.

Actually, the "time" came several years ago, when enrolments commenced turning downward But the 1977 Legislature can still act with relative dispatch by enacting some version of Columbus Sen. Don Dworak's LB215. The bill comes up for public hearing before the Education Committee Monday afternoon.

The Lincoln Board of Education is against the measure. That's not surprising. No governmental agency ever wants to give up an element of its power. That immutable rule must have been propounded back in Plato's day

LB215, as introduced, would repeal the law permitting school districts to impose a property tax equal to 4 mills every year for capital improvement purposes.

Dworak's original intent was to require school districts to gain voters' approval for bond issues if new schools are to be built, older ones reconditioned or sites acquired. Since then, Dworak has indicated he might be willing to permit a pay-as-you-go property tax levy, but only if first authorized by school district voters.

The pay-as-you-go approach carries the attraction of avoiding the need to pay interest on general obligation bonds. That can be a large tax saving.

Historically, the bond issue route was the primary avenue for financing new public school construction. During the postwar "baby boom," however, surging enrolments tended to overwhelm some districts' building programs. Other districts had projects not considered big enough to warrant a bond issue ballot question.

Thus was born the device of giving school districts a discretionary 4-mill property tax levy — in addition to their unrestricted property taxing power for operational purposes.

A number of Nebraska school districts levy the full 4 mills every year, year after year. In Lincoln, the 4 mills currently raises about $2 million annually. No puny sum.

Lincoln school officials assert there has been "no apparent significant abuse of this taxing authority."

Abuse, of course, is not the focal issue. Responsibility is.

When school boards independently determine where and when to build new school buildings, they are making very long-term public policy, carrying public commitments and assumptions for 30 or 40 years. New school buildings even can influence the direction of a community's physical growth, which gives rise to many interrelated public policy considerations.

Responsibility for declaring this fundamental public policy should be borne directly by the entire community, at the ballot box — maybe even project by project — and not indirectly, through a majority of school board members.

If the building projects are warranted, the public surely will respond affirmatively. Schools, after all, do belong to the people of the community, not transient school board members or hired administrators.

VOA at age 35

The Voice of America, official U.S. overseas radio service, celebrated its 35th birthday last week still tied to its parents' apron strings.

If the VOA staff had its way, it would be cut loose. A majority of its employes recently demanded just that in a petition.

VOA is part of the U.S. Information Agency which looks to the State Department for counsel on foreign policy matters. Consequently, State has considerable to say about the radio service airs. VOA broadcasts are often censored, staff members charge.

Especially under Henry Kissinger, who ran a tight ship as secretary of state, planned broadcasts were revised or omitted. As a result, VOA lost some of its credibility abroad, the staff claims.

As President Carter prepares to reorganize the federal government, perhaps it is time for him — and for Congress, which appropriates funds for VOA — to take a fresh look at the role of the radio service. Even, possibly, at whether it is still needed. Its original purpose, back in 1942, was to beam propaganda to German soldiers during World War II.

In the past some USIA directors have believed there is no better propaganda than truth, and tried to run both USIA generally and VOA in particular by that criterion. Those periods undoubtedly marked VOA's greatest success and influence abroad.

Assuming the radio service is to continue, it ought to be free to deal with events objectively, rather than reflect a State Department bias. If the President, in his reorganization, does not want to put VOA under an independent board, he might consider linking it with the Corporation for Public Broadcasting and National Public Radio

A general who cares

A reader supplies information we didn't have, but delight in passing on.

A week ago Saturday, 750 Nebraska National Guardsmen returned from winter training at Camp Roberts, Calif. Most of them were flown back.

As they disembarked from the aircraft, we are told, waiting to welcome the troops and shake all hands was Nebraska's new Adj Gen. Ed Binder. Maybe it was a symbolic gesture, but that act made a considerable impression.

We rather think it simply reflects Gen Binder's basic caring nature.

This little episode suggests things are looking up for the Nebraska National Guard

Marijuana peril

The article on bills LB187 and LB269 (Sunday Journal and Star, Feb 20) represents man's inhumanity to man

The American Medical Association states the strength of marijuana sold in this country varies widely. It is almost always cut with tobacco or some other substance. Sometimes other potent drugs are added. It is impossible to know what is being sold under the name of marijuana. There is no quality control in the drug business.

There are no laws that say I shouldn't send a three-year-old to play in the street, but does that make it safe? Jeff Kushner in the article states we have no indication that marijuana is harmful. How many teenagers last year were taken to doctors for mental depression? How many committed suicide? How many stole? How many got a bad mix in with marijuana and were affected mentally? If he doesn't know, I would think before making such a statement he better find out

Parents, marijuana is available to anyone who wants it at junior highs and high schools. The number it destroys is growing. Don't wait until it's your child

Catholics seal racism's fate in S. Africa

Garry Wills

In recent months, Catholic schools in South Africa have been integrated, and government officials have threatened to cancel their accreditation and subsidies

Apartheid, you see, is not really restricted to direct government action, as some of South Africa's kept Catholic journalists would like to suggest. Separation is forced on private groups and people, just as Jim Crow laws were imposed in our Southern states. Those who opposed "forced integration" did not reflect that forced separation was a greater state intrusion into freedom than integration would ever be.

Catholic teachers in South Africa have refused to be intimidated. Their church now declares its intention to do things even less acceptable to the racist government: whites will worship with blacks and even be served by black priests. I can remember when such moves would have been fought by my Catholic grandmother in Atlanta.

We should, admittedly, recall how recent our own moves away from racism have been. But that reflection cuts two ways. The speed and thoroughness of our own civil rights revolution was part of a worldwide change in moral attitudes, and South Africa's holdout position is rapidly being eroded. As Ambassador Andrew Young realizes, we have only a short time left to put ourselves on the winning as well as the right side in this conflict.

There are certain shifts in moral mood as much a part of the landscape as the migration of ice floes or shift of volcanic pressures. Slavery was unchallengeable for centuries, and then became indefensible. Winston Churchill rallied England with imperial rhetoric in World War II, yet in a few years the very concept of empire was discredited. Racism, like slavery and colonialism, can no longer make a plausible case for itself. Now practical considerations, the very basis on which rear-guard defenses have been built, dictate a change.

The argument for racial separation was never high-minded, as if that should be the ideal. How can human beings, whose whole equipment is so clearly intended for mutual communication, make it a matter of principle to be severed from their fellows, have other minds, other heirs of Adam, sons of God, companions in the heritage of creation?

But there have been practical arguments of great force in the past for accepting objectionable practices. It would invite chaos, we were told, to abolish slavery, free colonies, cancel Jim Crow laws. Sometimes those arguments made sense. But once the psychic atmosphere changes sharply, then "practical" arguments become as impractical as they are immoral.

Racism's demise will cause problems. Yet the doomed attempt to delay that demise will not ameliorate the evil; it will only aggravate it. The longer one holds off the inevitable, the angrier men must become at this perverse use of a fading power.

The Catholic opposition to South African racism is its death knell. Christian churches have often been timorous on social matters, but when at last they begin to face reality, this is the signal of that mood-shift that makes the immoral become, at last, impractical as well.

We saw this in our own country. The moral authority of churches put the seal of finality on the civil rights movement of the 1960s. Churches too rarely enunciate the first word in our moral universe. But they often get the last word.

White racism will die slowly in South Africa, but its death sentence has already been pronounced, by priests and nuns and bishops

Chinese card in America's hand still a trump

Joseph Kraft

"The week that changed the world," President Nixon said of the time he spent in China five years ago. Now hardly anybody would share that ebullient judgment.

China has been devalued as a factor in world politics — partly because of internal crisis, partly because of increasing Soviet sophistication and partly because of American mistakes, including non-compliance with secret agreements. Still, there is a Chinese card to play, and how it gets played is one of the tests of the Carter administration.

Nixon and Kissinger conceived of China in an international strategic setting. Their view was that visible signs of rapport between Washington and Peking could be used to squeeze concessions from Moscow.

In its first test that notion was at least partially successful. Russians came near to panic at the time of the Nixon visit in February 1972. They moved rapidly to engage the United States in a series of bilateral understandings on arms control, trade and Vietnam. The latter deal — which entailed Russia looking the other way when the U.S. was blockading and bombing North Vietnam — forced Hanoi to make a settlement with Washington including concessions which far exceeded what most people thought could be wrung from Communists.

But after the initial success of 1972 the whole picture changed. Peking became increasingly preoccupied in a battle for the succession which reached its climax only after the death of Mao Tse-tung last September.

Moreover, Moscow, after the initial shock of the Nixon visit, became quite adept at dealing with the Chinese. At critical junctures, when tension between the two Communist giants seemed likely to erupt, the Russians sent their deputy foreign minister, Leonid Ilyichev, to Peking, to negotiate on China's territorial claims against the Soviet Union. When the foremost Chinese leaders passed away, the Russians ostentatiously sent condolences. Thus China was made to seem like the troublemaker, and put on the defensive against Moscow.

Then there were the American mistakes. The centerpiece of the 1972 Nixon visit was the Shanghai communique pointing toward American recognition of the Communist regime as the legitimate government of China. Inferentially, at least, Washington would abandon its ties to Taiwan.

Though there is no proof of this, it now seems apparent Nixon and Kissinger virtually promised Peking they would scrap the Taiwan connection in a couple of years. These promises were evidently made in secret conversations between Kissinger and Mao himself. When Huang Chen, the head of the Chinese mission to Washington, went to see President Carter on Feb. 8, he asked if the new administration was aware of those understandings. It wasn't, and immediately set to work to find a copy.

President Ford, beset with opposition from the right, was in poor position to make good on the apparent commitments of his predecessor. Hence the rather cool attitude toward Ford on his visit to Peking, and to Kissinger when he went to Peking to pave the way for the Ford visit.

But whatever the full story of the past, the present offers the chance for a new start. The Chinese seem to be softening the leadership struggle. Comments made to recent Western visitors, including this columnist, indicate the Chinese are alert to — and unhappy about — the Soviet game of killing criticism with friendliness.

Finally, the Carter administration has a new hand to play. It can give a lift to Sino-American relations by picking up a suggestion made by Peking that the two countries begin talking about various unresolved financial claims right away. It can ease Chinese concern about Taiwan by reducing American troop strength and not appointing a new ambassador.

For despite the changes over the past five years, the possibility of good ties with Peking remains a major diplomatic asset to the U.S. The shock of 1972 will never be recreated But China, and the ideological and real threat it poses to Russia's claim to lead the Communist world, is still one of the best things Washington has going against Moscow.

President-watching

Still a puzzle

By Tom Braden

Jimmy Carter has been on the job more than a month, and the professional President-watchers in this town still can't figure him out

The same people who have been complaining for years about wagon circles in the White House are now suggesting Carter will sooner or later make a terrible mistake with some off-the-cuff remark His statement about renewing relations with Cuba, for example, which seemed directly contrary to a previous statement by his secretary of state, and the seemingly gratuitous slap at Congress for taking what "they used to call a recess."

By nature and training, President-watchers are negative critics To praise overmuch seems to demean their own vast experience as President-watchers So at the conclusion of Carter's first press conference, during which he handled himself so well nobody could think of anything to criticize, the President-watchers immediately thought back to John Kennedy who also invariably handled himself well and as they pointed out, with more humor

Yet when they learned Carter was not spending as much time as Kennedy did in being briefed in preparation for these press encounters they warned of dangers in this course and worried about trouble ahead

Enough de-pomping

By Rowland Evans and Robert Novak

Having shucked perquisites for White House staffers and pomp and ceremony for himself, President Carter has instructed aides that it's fine with him if they call him "Mr President" instead of "Mr Carter" or "Governor"

Those three titles were suggested as options in a note that White House speechwriter James Fallows gave the President Doing away with the traditional "Mr. President," Fallows told Carter, would be one more step in "de-pomping" the office. But did Jimmy really want to be called plain old Mr. Carter or Governor?

Apparently not. Carter circulated the Fallows note among some senior staffers but then let it be known de-pomping had gone far enough Thus whenever any outsider is around, he will be called "Mr. President" — a title adopted in 1789 as more democratic than "Your Highness," the salutation proposed by John Adams In private, one senior aide told us, he still occasionally says "Jimmy," and gets away with it

A neat desk

By Saul Kohler

Jimmy Carter keeps a neat desk in the Oval Office but he has some mementos.

He has the Harry Truman sign ("The Buck Stops Here") and a crystal donkey kicking up its crystal heels, presented by the Georgia Democratic organization while he still was candidate Carter. So much for politics.

There is a Bible, which appears well-used and not there for display only, and a plaque which bridges his religion and his experience as a Navy officer and Annapolis graduate "O God, Thy sea is so great and my boat so small," it says A desk set (fountain pen and pencil) and white phone console complete the furnishings

But remember Carter, like many other presidents, prefers to work in the smaller study just off the Oval Office — and that's the place the mound of presidential papers is to be found.

Like a new pastor

By Max Lerner

Every recent president has aimed at trust, few have achieved it Of the last seven presidents, only Roosevelt and Eisenhower succeeded in establishing an atmosphere of trust on any considerable scale Both were father figures Roosevelt because he broke the trauma of fear in the depression Eisenhower because he was a war hero Carter is no father figure He is more like the new pastor in the community who has some novel ideas and exudes a genial good will If he wins the people's trust it will be mainly because he is trying to carry over from the last century the old-time religion and elements of the traditional value system

A Canadian Northern Ireland?

By J F terHorst

OPINIONS

Toronto — For the U S , the Confederacy finally was laid to rest last Nov 3 with the votes of Southern whites and blacks For Canada, secession became a live prospect last Nov 15, with the overwhelming electoral victory of the Parti Quebecois in the Province of Quebec Since then, newspapers, newscasts, politicians and the people have talked of little else

Quebec wants out Or so says Quebec's Prime Minister Rene Levesque, who even traveled to New York City last month to persuade the U S financial community that an independent nation of Quebec would be a good neighbor and a good investment

The threat of secession prompted Canada's Prime Minister Trudeau last week to use the forum of a joint session of Congress — the first such appearance by any Canadian — to rebut Levesque Trudeau called Quebec's Separatist movement "a crime against humanity" and pledged that Canada's unity would not be fractured

It is a bold promise Here in English-speaking Toronto, a civilized metropolis that is the envy of many Americans, the citizenry is not so sure that Trudeau or the rest of Canada can prevent secession. Short of wartime occupation, that is.

Supporters of confederation, the Canadian equivalent of our union, are grasping at straws — anything, really — that seems to forestall the threatened Quebec walkout

The front page news here last week was the brief interview Carter gave a Canadian correspondent for C-TV, the country's commercial television network, during Trudeau's visit to Washington The President, perhaps unwittingly, allowed himself to be drawn into the dispute over Quebec

Coming out for a continuation of Canadian unity, Carter said, "If I were the one to make the decision, a confederation would be my preference but that's a decision for the Canadian people to make "

The President's remarks were not even picked up by the Washington papers or the New York Times on Tuesday morning, although they created a sensation in Canada — including French-speaking Montreal, the hub of Quebec Province

In Washington, Trudeau blamed the Quebec secession movement on Canada's failure to create the social and political conditions in which French-Canadians could feel they were fully equal with English-speaking Canadians, or could fully develop the richness of their French-based culture He promised the Ottawa government of Canada would make accommodations to preserve national unity

But can it be done? Canadians themselves are unsure. After all, Canada has no constitution of its own. The basic law in Canada is still the British North America Act, which formed the confederation of separately governed Canadian territories in 1867 The act can be amended only by the British Parliament, a fact that rankles provincial leaders everywhere, not just in Quebec

So Canada is caught without a law that can be interpreted as preventing secession or permitting it In Quebec, Levesque's party is going ahead with plans for a provincial referendum in two years If Quebeckers vote to secede, the rest of Canada may hold a referendum to counteract it But could that stop secession without sending in Canadian troops? Nobody knows the answer

What's more scary for Canadians is the domino effect Quebec's separatist movement may have on the rest of the country Small independent parties already have formed in some western provinces like British Columbia and Alberta, which long have resented the interference of the central government at Ottawa

Using force to keep Canada together is a prospect that makes Canadians shudder A noted historian at the University of Toronto fears such action would turn Quebec into "another North Ireland "

A widely known journalist doubts Canada would go to civil war over Quebec in the way that Americans went to war to preserve the Union "Your country was founded on an ideal, so you fought; Canada was founded on compromise "

Compromise, in other words, could preserve Canadian unity or it could result in secession and the creation of independent states along our northern border And about all that Americans can do is echo Carter s words — and wait for the shoe to drop

Nebraska's Fourth Estate

Worrying about water

If Colorado is worried about the availability of water this spring and summer, it follows that Nebraska — in particular arid western Nebraska — better get worried, too If not, regional farmers might be rudely shocked when they turn on their irrigation systems in mid-summer and nothing comes out, and city folks might be surprised to find water pressures reduced, and maybe even rationing, as the underground water tables get overly tapped

It would be wise if Nebraska state officials and local governments started to assess the situation

— Scotts Bluff Star-Herald

Some experts have said that it may take three or four years to formulate an over all policy on water However, some state senators have indicated they feel we might need 10 years to come up with proper solutions

We don't have 10 years! Will the Legislature fiddle while Nebraska dries up and blows away? Why can't the Legislature recognize this emergency situation and devote the bulk of this session and if necessary the next session to this vital problem?

— Holdrege Citizen

Avoiding valuation windfalls

Perhaps the state needs LB131 introduced in the Nebraska Legislature It would not allow government subdivision budgets to grow more than 6% a year to prevent them from taking advantage of increased valuations to raise "windfall" revenue

— South Sioux City Star

Food tax credit too high

The increase (to $24) from the present $16 food tax credit is too generous A boost to $20 is logical, since that represents a 3% sales tax on the $2 700 annual food costs which are the average for the family of four Boosting the sum to $24 provides a bonus, not a rebate

— Norfolk Daily News

Don't raise drinking age

Although teen age drinking is a growing problem, raising the drinking age would not solve it Anyone who can remember prohibition or the last beer party they attended knows where there s a will, there's usually a way

Teaching reflects philosophic evolution

By Robert H. Reid

New York (AP) — To a young philosophy professor at the College of William and Mary, rock musicians don't just make noise. Some discuss existential philosophy.

To a philosopher at the University of Toledo, the computer isn't just a device to snarl credit card accounts. It's a tool for teaching symbolic logic.

Scores of colleges are offering courses such as "Philosophy and Sex" or "The Philosophy of Aging" and using modern tools such as television and the computer.

Supporters of such methods concede that, as with other liberal arts, the percentage of undergraduates taking philosophy probably has declined in the last five years. They say classroom innovations can reach the student who might take only one or two philosophy courses.

But skeptics in the academic community wonder if fad has not replaced scholarship.

"First thing, the teaching of philosophy certainly is in need of improvement," said Dr. Sidney Hook, renowned philosopher, author and fellow at the Hoover Institution for War, Revolution and Peace in Stanford, Calif.

AP NEWSFEATURES ILLUSTRATION

One method warranted

"But in philosophy, there is only one teaching method which is warranted by the nature of philosophy, and that is the Socratic method, in which the teacher does not proclaim truths, but makes the student think and question. Anything else is edification, but not philosophy."

New directions in philosophy were taken in the early 1970s and, according to some philosophers, were offshoots of the student activist movement.

"The student movement of the 1960s demanded that intellectuals be more relevant to their world," said Dr. Terrell Bynam, philosophy professor and director of the National Resource Center for the Teaching of Philosophy.

At William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va., Prof. James Harris has turned to rock music to illustrate philosophic principles.

"I admit a lot of Top 40 stuff is trash. But there are some really intelligent and sensitive observers of the human situation who are writing and performing rock music.

Music reflects life

"For example, there's a lot that can be done with alienation in rock music, the kind of alienation a lot of existential philosophy is talking about, particularly Leon Russell's 'Stranger in a Strange Land' or Moody Blues' 'In a Lost World.' "

At the University of Toledo, Prof. Richard Wright uses computers to teach students how to work proofs in symbolic logic.

"The computer program gives him hints in solving the problems and tests his work," Wright said. "Many students are embarrassed to ask too many questions, but with the computer they can go back and work the problems as many times as they please."

In other departments, professors have applied traditional philosophy to 20th century American life.

At the University of Delaware, Dr. Sandra Harding uses philosophers as diverse as Plato and Karl Marx to examine the status of women.

"We look at feminist theory as critical of the concepts that have shaped society," she said. "We examine theoretical proposals to change the status of women and study various explanations for the opporession of women. Freud and Marx, for example, focused on the oppression of women but had very different ideas on why this happened and how to change it."

Ignorant criticism

"Since Plato and Aristotle, the leading thinkers of Western thought have been examining the questions of women and the nature of the family. This kind of criticism comes from ignorance," she said.

The thoughts of Western philosophers also are being applied to sexuality problems.

At the University of Maryland, Dr. Frederick Suppe teaches a course on philosophy and homosexuality. He says he uses philosophy to show the homosexual student "how to incorporate his homosexuality into an overall lifestyle so that one has a rewarding life."

Suppe also teaches a similar course for heterosexual students. But he says homosexual problems are particularly challenging because "most philosophers and theologians have condemned any homosexual activity as immoral."

"The focus is on the students discovering who they are sexually and how they feel about their sexual roles," Suppe said. "The underlying premise is that most people have variously deceived themselves on what they want out of their sex lives and what their sexual desires are."

He said nearly 95% of his students in both classes are majoring in fields other than philosophy.

Dr. Harry Moody, who teaches philosophy at New York's Hunter College, claims philosophy can help "fill the vacuum of meaning" and help the elderly prepare for death.

Moody, 31, says his age is no problem in teaching students old enough to be his parents.

"I tell them that I know something about academics and they know something from the school of life," he said. "They enjoy that, and I learn from them."

Although he has reservations about some trends, Dr. Norman Bowie, executive secretary of the American Philosophical Assn., said the APA welcomed efforts to enliven the teaching of philosophy.

Carter shortchanging big cities — mayors

From News Wires

Washington — The nation's big cities are being shortchanged by the Carter administration, according to the U.S. Conference of Mayors, whose spokesman says Carter in his first five weeks as president has proved to be "too cautious."

Carter's first federal spending plan reveals increased aid to financially strapped cities, but the mayors' group says Carter "has ignored the need for new social initiatives," such as health insurance or welfare reform.

The conference issued a 50-page analysis of Carter's 1978 budget proposals, praising some and criticizing others.

Carter's budget would increase urban funds in areas such as public works and community development, but Carter seeks cutbacks in programs to battle urban crime and he seeks no increase in job opportunities for teenagers in the central cities.

Many mayors had hoped Carter would seek the initial steps of a national health insurance program and a welfare reform package. However, Carter only seeks funds to conduct studies for such sweeping changes.

In a budget analysis released Saturday, the mayors said: "In many budget areas, important urban programs have been cut below fiscal 1977 levels or their growth restrained to rates of increase well below the inflation rate."

City officials say Carter may have deliberately shortchanged domestic programs, believing Congress would seek higher spending no matter what levels he set. In fact, Congress is expected to double Carter's request for $2 billion in public works jobs aid.

The mayors conference praised increases in community development and antirecession aid, but said the Carter budget is inadequate for mass transit and youth employment needs.

Another urban group, the conservative National League of Cities, expressed dismay at cuts in crime-fighting funds. With summer approaching, city officials are afraid that continued high unemployment among teen-agers could lead to trouble.

"We can't paint it worse than it is," says conference Executive Director John Gunther. "The nation's big cities are threatened."

"This budget isn't as much as we thought we had reason to hope for," Gunther said. But " . . . I don't think anybody reneged on a promise. It's what we thought we were promised, what we hoped we were promised."

to:
* Help save taxpayer's $7 million?
* Strengthen Lincoln's economy now?
* Make Lincoln a more attractive community?
* Increase property values in south Lincoln?

Then just clip this advertisement and go see the two south Lincoln sites involved in the city council decision

What's At Stake?

Millions of dollars in public money is at stake. The ease and convenience with which people can shop and buy needed services is at stake. How well Lincoln people can meet the energy shortage is at stake. And much more.

Drive to 27th and Pine Lake Road, check your mileage, then drive one mile south of 27th and Old Cheney Road. That's the site for the proposed regional shopping center. But all you'll find there now is a barbed wire fence winding up a hill toward a lonesome tree. That fence (running east from 27th St.) is the south line of the proposed 80-acre commercial development. Pine Lake Road—when it is built—will run along that wire fence line.

Then Drive To 40th and Old Cheney

The multi-use center proposed by Newt Copple would be built on the southwest corner of 40th and Old Cheney, on 160 acres of land, and would be the epitome of modern planning, design, and construction

Disadvantages of 27th and Pine Lake Road As A Development Site

- It's location on the edge of future development is a reason for staging construction as a regional center in the 1986-2000 period. This will delay serving South Lincoln residents for many years.
- Lacks potential to attract new, dynamic retailers
- Delay in development will inevitably lead to more strip development in South Lincoln
- Necessitates building Pine Lake Road as a 4-lane highway at a cost of $7 plus to taxpayers
- Delay in development will waste precious energy as South Lincoln residents drive longer distances to shop.
- Commercial buildings in a watershed not now served by city. Lift stations will be needed. This practice has been against city policy, as in the Stevens Creek watershed controversy.
- 80 acres not enough for a regional, multi-use center

Advantages of the 40th and Old Cheney Development Plan

- Will attract new retail dollars to Lincoln and strengthen economy.
- More centrally located to market it will be serving, and thus has potential to attract high quality retailers as tenants
- Quality and scope of design will increase residential values in adjoining neighborhoods
- Economic studies recently made by Hammer, Siler, George Associates — the same firm that did economic projections for Lincoln in 1974 — show precisely that this development can be opened by 1980 without hurting downtown or Gateway retail business
- Will save taxpayers the $7 million plus needed to construct Pine Lake Road as a four-lane
- The 160 acre area has utilities available
- Perimeter buffer of heavy landscaping and green open spaces will give the development a park-like atmosphere and be a positive impact on adjoining homes and neighborhoods.
- Complete vehicular interior road system within the site will keep traffic impact on 40th and Old Cheney at a minimum
- Will greatly increase the tax base for Lincoln
- Will help control growth of South Lincoln
- Will provide jobs for hundreds
- Will help people of South Lincoln conserve energy, because they can come to one site and meet most shopping and and service needs

Kissing intentions altruistic

Indiana, Pa. (UPI) — Jeff Henzler hopes to raise $10,000 by getting 3,000 girls to pay him to kiss them.

Since he wants to get it over with in less than eight hours, the girls are going to have to queue up at a rate of one every 9.5 seconds, give or take a few tenths of a second.

Actually, Henzler's intentions are more altruistic than amorous. He wants to raise the money for Bob Piorkowski, his roommate at Indiana University of Pennsylvania, who fell from the roof of their fraternity house Feb. 12 and broke his back.

Piorkowski, 21, is paralyzed from the waist down and will be operated on next week. Henzler, 22, hopes his kiss-a-thon will help raise enough money to pay the hospital bills not covered by the insurance company.

Kissing day will be March 5.

With the active support of the university and the local business community, Henzler plans to open for business in a booth on a mall just outside the campus.

"There's 3,200 girls in the dorms alone," Henzler said. "Of course, not all of them will want to participate for various and other reasons, but we'll get some from town and around.

Asked where he plans to kiss them, he said, "Well, I think I'll hit them all on the lips.

"Some of the girls will be rough, though," he said. "With 3,000 girls, they're not all going to be beauties.

"But I'll take all the girls I can get. If they wish, they can donate whatever they want after I kiss them."

Henzler's goal is to break the world record, listed in the Guiness Book of World Records as 3,000 girls kissed in eight hours by a gentleman in California.

By way of preparation, Henzler plans to take a few vitamins and get a good night's sleep.

"I'll also do a little bit of practicing," Henzler said. "Of course, I've been practicing all along."

Clifford Hopeful on Cyprus Talks

London (AP) — U.S. presidential envoy Clark Clifford flew in from Cprus on Saturday and said his talks with Cypriot, Greek and Turkish leaders gave him "a very real hope" for a settlement on the divided island by the of 1977. The lawyer told an airport news conference that Greek and Turkish Cypriots both said they were "prepared to get down to constructive negotiating" in talks scheduled for March 31 in Vienna.

Rome bans vehicles from city center

Rome (AP) — More than 2,000 years after Julius Caesar tried it, Rome's Marxist managers banned vehicles Saturday from part of the city's historic and eternally clogged center. Traffic Commissioner Tullion de Felice cited "congestion and pollution reasons" as he closed part of the right bank of the Tiber River to all cars but those of residents and trucks supplying local stores. The zone includes the Piazza Farnese, site of the French Embassy, and the square of Campo dei Fiori, both popular tourist areas.

11 Moscow Fire Victims Identified

Moscow (AP) — Soviet officials identified at least 11 people who died in a Friday night fire at Moscow's mammoth Hotel Rossiya and some 20 other bodies were unofficially reported as still unidentified, Western diplomatic sources said Saturday. Officials at the 3,200-room hotel showed diplomats a list of 11 dead Soviet and East European citizens. There were no Americans or West Europeans on the list and reports in diplomatic circles said no Westerners were believed to have been killed in the fire.

Buffalo free food stamp final total $23 million

Buffalo, N.Y. (AP) — The great food stamp giveaway ended Saturday with an estimated 525,000 persons, nearly half the county's population, getting $23 million worth of free food stamps, officials said.

Fred J. Buscaglia, social services commissioner for Erie County, criticized the federal program for not having income limits for those eligible for the aid.

"I don't think that a person with $10,000 in the bank should be eligible. There should be a resource limit," he said.

Under the program, anyone who lost at least one day's income because of storm-related problems was eligible for stamps, regardless of his income or amount of savings.

The program began Feb. 10 after Erie and eight other counties were declared federal disaster areas by President Carter because of the Jan. 28 blizzard.

A family of four could receive $166 worth of food stamps to be used as money at supermarkets.

Coast Guard's thin blue line grows thinner

By John Barbour

Miami (AP) — For almost 187 years the U.S. Coast Guard has quietly gone about the nation's business, a thin blue line of sailors, charged with thwarting smugglers, manning lighthouses, breaking ice, patrolling rivers, policing ports, chasing icebergs, tracking oil spills, answering distress calls and redeeming the weary and weak from the savage sea.

Come Tuesday, that thin blue line will be stretched even thinner.

On that day, the Coast Guard inherits still another major mission — monitoring foreign fishing boats out to 200 miles from any U.S. shore.

That means policing an area more than half the size of the United States.

"Semper Paratus," reads the Coast Guard motto — always ready. But ready or not, enforcing the new law will not be easy, and it will certainly tax this force of aging, hand-me-down ship snad planes and the 37,000 men and women already on duty around the clock and around the world.

It can be done

Neither Congress nor the Coast Guard has voiced public doubt that the job can be done, despite the fact that Coast Guard duties have burgeoned in recent years.

It all began as a puny revenue service for a small new nation, cracking down on importers who resorted to smuggling to avoid paying tariffs.

Today, it operates from the Pacific to the Atlantic, from the Great Lakes to the Gulf, and in all major waterways from the Hudson River to the Mississippi. Its ships and planes run the International Ice Patrol in the North Atlantic. It enforces small boat safety rules and maintains thousands of navigational aids from Long Island Sound to Marina del Rey. It totes its boats inland to the rescue in major floods. It governs bridges over navigable waters. In time of war, it joins the Navy. And from the Island of Yap in the Pacific to the shores of Africa and Europe, it operates long-range radio navigation stations that mark the highways on the open sea.

The Coast Guard with its vermillion sash has a reputation somewhat akin to the Royal Canadian Mounted Police and the Texas Rangers. It carries out its myriad tasks with a minimum of fuss and a paucity of manpower.

Guard Stations

Most of its stations are only 15 to 20 sailors strong. Some are little more than a radio antenna, a clove of palm trees and a few Coast Guardsmen.

Added responsibilities are accepted matter of factly. When the 200-mile extension came up, the Coast Guard sent one — repeat, one — guardsman to language school to learn Russian in a hurry.

In the mega-figures of government spending, the Coast Guard is a drop in the ocean. Its budget has increased less than 60% since 1973 to $1.4 billion. That is barely twice what the other services spend on recruiting alone.

In recent years, Congress decided the Coast Guard should guard lobster and crab stocks on the continental shelf. The Coast Guard adjusted. In recent years, Congress has asked the Coast Guard to keep an eye on the increasing number of tankers bringing oil, thousands of them, some of which run aground or spill oil in coastal waters. The Coast Guard did.

Without a smile, Adm. Owen W. Siler, commandant of the Coast Guard, viewed the equipment the Guard is getting for its new tasks and said:

"It will not be possible to have all these additional resources on hand by 1 March 1977. This, of course, does not mean that we will not be able to start our enforcement of the new law on its effective date."

Old seaplane tender

To handle its new responsibility, the Coast Guard is getting one mothballed seaplane tender, the Unimak, built in 1942, and eight long-range aircraft. It also is getting 41 new medium-range jets. On Jan. 14, the Coast Guard notes a distress call from its own new cutter Unimak, which suffered extensive damage when an engine room caught fire.

The additional ship and planes join a Coast Guard fleet of 248 ships and 1,917 boats, 118 helicopters and 56 fixed-wing aircraft. Many of those aircraft are Albatross seaplanes built in 1953 and no longer able to land at sea. They are being phased out.

The new 200-mile limit will reduce the catch of almost every species of fish in the important American offshore breeding grounds. It will affect mostly those nations with hardy maritime appetites such as the Soviet Union, Denmark and Japan.

They are further hemmed in by 200-mile limits established by Canada and Mexico. And some special arrangment will have to be made with Cuba, another heavy fishing nation, which lies only 90 miles off the Florida coast.

The history of international cooperation is not good. Indeed, the nations of the world have agreed to prohibit their tankers from dumping oil in the ocean, or washing out their tanks except when the vessel is in danger. But ships at sea, far from the authority of a sovereign shore, frequently wink at such rules.

85 went aground

Most foreign-flag vessels do not keep such rigid standards as those imposed by the Coast Guard on U.S.-flag vessels. And despite Coast Guard efforts, of the 15,000 tankers docked at U.S. ports in 1975, 85 went aground in U.S. waters and 6 of these spilled oil. Policing violators and cleaning up the mess are part of the Coast Guard's duties, yet it has no authority to board and inspect foreign vessels at will, unless there is an accident or the safety of the vessel is in question.

The Coast Guard was waiting for the ill-starred Argo Merchant to come within the three-mile limit of its authority to board and inspect for deficiencies when the tanker went aground and broke up, spilling its oil into the fishing grounds.

Effective Tuesday, the Coast Guard will be empowered to board foreign fishing vessels when there is evidence that they have broken U.S. regulations.

Most of the surveillance will be from the air, with fishery experts riding Coast Guard planes and helicopters. Their trained eyes, the Coast Guard says, can determine the kind and size of catch.

Later, the guard hopes to inaugurate satellite surveillance and radio detection techniques to find foreign vessels that stray from permitted areas.

Aiding distressed

Whatever duties are added, the Coast Guard has one urgent and primary task — to answer distress calls anywhere.

Ships of all nations rely on the Coast Guard.

In one typical month its computers searched out nearby aid for 8 downed aircraft, 8 ship sinkings, 7 fires, 32 sick crewmen, 8 man-overboards.

Food, ag, rural affairs split suggested for Carter

Washington (UPI) — A National Planning Assn. (NPA) committee recommended Saturday that President Carter's reorganization planners shouldn't break up the Agriculture Dept. but should restructure it into a new department of food, agriculture and rural affairs.

The NPA report made no direct reference to Carter's plans to study reorganization of the entire federal government structure. But it urged the new administration to "improve and strengthen the policy coordination process . . . with regard to food, agriculture and rural affairs."

Committee members said the Agriculture Dept., although it has effectively promoted commercial agriculture, has been hesitant in operating some food programs and has "largely ignored" rural development.

But shifting such activities to another federal agency like the Department of Health, Education and Welfare would be a poor solution, the report said. It said food and rural living are closely related to the farm economy.

Besides, the report said, shifting food and development programs out of the Agriculture Dept. would weaken farmers politically. The committee said this would hurt consumers in the long run because they benefit when farmers are economically healthy.

The report said the best answer is to give the Agriculture Dept. a new name and lay down three separate but equal missions — food, agriculture and rural affairs — each to have equal priority and status.

In addition, the report said a food and agriculture council — like the National Security Council — should be created at the White house level to consider domestic and international food policy.

The national planning association describes itself as a nonprofit, nonpolitical organization devoted to planning in agriculture, business, labor and the professions.

Pentagon scientists build laser weapon

Washington (AP) — U.S. scientists have scored a research breakthrough in development of a ray-gun type weapon for possible future space battles, a senior Pentagon official has told Congress.

The breakthrough points to solution of one of the biggest problems which has perplexed the scientists — how to reduce high-energy laser beam devices to small enough size and weight to be carried by satellites.

Dr. George Heilmeier, director of the Pentagon's advanced research projects agency, said a way has been found in the laboratory to increase critical energy output by 350 times, using chemical lasers.

"During the past year our goal of demonstrating useful efficiencies was reached in a small-scale device," Heilmeier told the House Armed Services Committee last week.

He said recently completed analysis of these experiments "indicates that laser systems incorporating much more efficient future chemical lasers may be feasible."

Heilmeier cautioned that "the technical problems are formidable" but "space is a favorable environment for chemical lasers."

Pentagon scientists have said it may be another 10 years before a practical space-based laser weapon is a reality.

Heilmeier described high-energy lasers in space as "a potential system to defend our own satellites against anti-satellite threats."

The Russians have stepped up their space testing of an anti-satellite system within the past year. The Soviet system does not use lasers, but relies on explosive techniques, according to U.S. intelligence officials.

"It is my belief that the high-energy laser in space could represent a Sputnik-like event, a technical achievement which could influence the perceptions of foreign countries as to who is the leader in defense-related technology," Heilmeier said.

He warned that such perceptions could have serious political implications in view of more obvious trends in other areas," obviously meaning Russian advances in growth of missile power.

Brazil coffee money benefits rural workers

By Edgar Miller

Rio de Janeiro, Brazil (AP) — Brazilian rural workers are getting better wages, new schools, roads and social improvements from the money Brazil receives in higher coffee prices paid by consumers in the United States and the rest of the world, says the head of the Brazilian Coffee Institute.

Camilo Calazans de Magalhaes said increased coffee export taxes — which have risen from 16 cents to 81 cents a pound since 1975 — are providing the government with funds to help rural workers, who many said were passed over in the Brazilian economic boom of a few years ago.

"I think it is better for the government to use this money in social work than to leave it in the hands of the rural landowner who is going to spend it abroad," Calazans added. "He will catch a ship or a plane and go to Paris. We are trying to keep these resources here and benefit the whole population.

Rural improvements

"For example, we are constructing secondary roads in coffee regions, we are broadening technical assistance . . . carrying out electrification programs.

"This is why we increased the export tax so that these resources would stay here. I get a log of flak from the farmers because of this, but I think it is in the interest of the country and within the more progressive social philosophy."

Brazil is in the midst of an industrialization program, and before oil price increases went into effect in 1973 the nation's economy was booming. But the military-led government came under heavy criticism from various quarters claiming the riches were not seeping down to the rural and urban poor.

Calazans also said he is trying to grow other crops as well as coffee on their plantations.

"We are trying to institute a coffee-growing system that creates a rural middle class with diversified farm activity as well as coffee," he said. "We are achieving this.

Wages Raised

"Coffee is paying the biggest salaries in rural work (now). A coffee plantation worker earns about 40 cruzeiros ($3.17) a day. We are helping the coffee workers in two ways: First, by establishing social assistance for farm laborers and obliging payment of higher salaries. Secondly, this quota (export tax) which we are so criticized for — this money remains in the hands of the government to be applied to building schools, roads, etc."

Calazans did not say how many rural workers are benefiting from the increased coffee income, but a spokesman for his institute said later about two million coffee workers in northern Parana state alone are now earning 40 to 50 cruzeiros (about $4) a day as opposed to the standard of $2 a day for workers in other agricultural areas. The minimum wage in major Brazilian cities is the equivalent of $70 a month and less than $50 a month in other urban areas.

The export tax was a major factor in the rise in coffee prices from an average of $1.27 a pound in the United States before a frost wiped out two-thirds of Brazil's coffee trees in 1975 to more than $3 a pound on some U.S. grocery shelves now.

Camilo Calazans de Magalhaes

81-cent tax

Before the frost, the tax was $21 for each 132-pound bag exported — or 16 cents a pound. As Brazil's stocks dwindled and demand increased, Calazan's government agency increased the export tax. In January it was raised to $103 a bag (78 cents a pound) and last Wednesday it went up to $107 a bag (81 cents a pound).

Before the frost Brazil had a stockpile of 50 million bags of coffee and because of this glut the price remained low. Calazans said these stocks are being depleted now.

"A fact that worries us very much is that these stocks are going to be used up this year," he said. "Then, 1978 will be a year completely subject to the vagaries of the harvest."

Another frost or other natural disasters such as floods, disease or drought in coffee-growing countries could mean even higher prices for coffee.

Here are other of key points of the interview:

Q. Do you fear the high prices and attempts at boycotts will reduce consumption in the United States?

A. Nobody is going to count cups of coffee. In the first few days maybe . . . When the price goes up they get scared. I don't believe there will be a big drop in consumption . . . Coffee doesn't weight heavily in the daily expense of the average family. In Brazil it's about 2% of the food budget but in the U.S. even less. It is not in this product that the housewife should try to make a saving . . . The reaction of the American people was not a surprise. We know Americans react to things like this.

Q. Do you see a parallel between the huge increase in coffee prices and the oil price increases by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC)?

A. . . . There is no parallel with OPEC. There was no crisis with petroleum as we had with coffee. There was the freeze here, the problems (civil war) in Angola. The restriction of the sale of petroleum in the world was something planned, thought out by the producers. But not so with coffee. It was due to things beyond our control. An act of God, if you will.

Energy plants may be grown

Richland, Wash. (AP) — Two state legislators say they're studying the possibility of growing "power plants" at the Hanford Nuclear Reservation.

The dry government reserve north of here might be a good site for raising plants that produce a liquid similar to crude oil, Rep. Claude Oliver, R-Kennewick, said. He is working with Sen. Max Benitz, R-Prosser, on the project.

The aveloz tree of Brazil and the gopher plant which grows in California "are just waiting to be put to use," said Prof. Melvin Calvin of the University of California in erkeley.

"It is just a matter of developing large plantations around the world," Calvin said.

"Less than two million acres of aveloz could produce crude oil equal to the refined petroleum this country uses each day," said Calvin, who won a 1961 Nobel Prize in chemistry.

Governors may modify Medicaid program

(c) New York Times

Washington — The nation's governors will vote Monday on a proposal to limit the ability of poor people to select their medical services under the Medicaid program.

The recommendation to modify the Medicaid provision that allows poor people to seek health services from almost any willing provider is potentially the most controversial in a package of proposed reforms to stem runaway costs in the $19 billion federal-state health program.

The reforms are being offered by a special Medicaid Task Force of the National Governors' Conference, which begins its annual meeting here today.

High priority item

Medicaid reform is described as "an item of highest priority" of the governors, who must approve by a two-thirds vote the recommendations of the special study group led by Gov. George Busbee of Georgia, for them to become policy.

While the limitation on choice of provider is aimed at a more technical question of allowing states to buy laboratory tests and other support services for Medicaid recipients from the cheapest source, it has broader implications.

Depending on the extent of such a change, which has some support on Capitol Hill, states could decide, for example, to limit simple surgery to the cheapest accredited hospital. But if the patient's doctor is not affiliated with that hospital, Medicaid could be determining the choice of physician as well, something the program now prohibits and which the American Medical Assn. is known to oppose.

In that sense, the need to control costs could move the nation back to some codified separate class of medical care for the poor.

Some payment

"States must be allowed in certain cases to determine which health services providers a recipient may use, if the same quality of care can be purchased at a lower cost," the study group's 26-page report concludes.

Among the other issues it presents to the governors for approval is a change in law to let states make Medicaid recipients, like Medicare participants, pay a small portion of their medical bills to discourage marginal trips to the doctor.

The use and benefit of this so-called co-payment has always been controversial in health care reform, but Georgia, under a special federal waiver, has used it with [illegible] success and has wanted other states to be able to do the same thing.

The recommendations also call for a change in the formula on which Medicaid payments to the states are made. The current formula, which relies heavily on per capita income, pays states between 50 and 78% of their Medicaid costs. The per capita emphasis is believed to penalize wealthier industrial states and unfairly aid southern states, and the study group asks that it be changed.

Home health care

Another modification being sought is expansion of approved programs for the elderly, such as home health care and homemaker and other services that allow old people to stay out of nursing homes. Nursing home expenses make up 40% of the program costs and include the price of caring for Medicare and other health insurance participants whose health benefits have been exhausted.

The recommendations also call for more accountability by medical peer review units to states, which must pay for the services certified by physician groups. And it recommends a number of technical changes to reduce fraud and abuse.

Wait for word

A full year after Venezuelan leftists abducted Ohio executive William Niehous, his family, his company and the Venezuelan government are still waiting for word of his fate. Niehous, 45, managed Venezuelan operations of Owens-Illinois Inc., the multinational container company from Toledo. Stephen Ankenbrandt

Reye's syndrome surgery tried

Kansas City, Kan. (AP) — Doctors have removed the right half of Stephen Ankenbrandt's skull, and they are confident the operation has saved his life from a rare ailment, Reye's syndrome.

Dr. Robert A. Morantz, a neurosurgeon, in a four-hour operation last Sunday removed half of the 14-year-old's skull and opened the sheath surrounding the brain so it could expand through the opening.

The Manhattan, Kan., youth was unconscious Friday, as he had been for a week. But his doctors at the University of Kansas Medical Center reported he made significant gains and no longer was in critical condition.

Reye's syndrome strikes children, damaging their livers and producing severe swelling of the brain. It first was identified in 1963 by an Australian pathologist.

Its cause has not been determined, but some physicians think it is linked to a virus. The federal Center for Disease Control at Atlanta has reported 20 cases in the first six weeks of this year, an increase over past years that public health officials think may be connected with Influenza B.

There is no specific treatment for Reye's syndrome and doctors say Stephen was the first patient at the Kansas hospital to undergo radical head surgery for it.

"He was dying when the operation was performed," Dr. Morantz said Friday. "Now the swelling of the brain is subsiding."

If there are no complications, the right half of his skill will be replaced within two weeks to a month. After the surgical scars have healed, there will be no obvious signs of what the youth went through.

One factor yet to be determined by Dr. Lester Lansky, a pediatric neuologist here who has studied Reye's syndrome, is whether Stephen's brain was damaged before the operation could be performed.

The surgery is similar to operations performed 10 to 15 times a year at the Kansas hospital on adults, usually to relieve brain swelling caused by accidents.

Probably fewer than a dozen such operations have been performed elsewhere in the country on Reye's syndrome patients, says Dr. Lansky, who knows of three at Cincinnati Children's Hospital and five at the University of Minnesota Hospital.

Two of the victims in Minnesota were so near death when they were taken to surgery that they could not be saved. Of the six survivors at the Cincinnati and Minnesota hospitals, one has completely recovered, two are mildly retarded and whether the others have brain damage has not been determined.

School moves quickly for students who witnessed murder

(c) New York Times

Detroit — Had it not been such a bizarre incident, the fatal shooting of 45-year-old Bettye McCaster might have been recorded on the police blotter here as just another chapter in the nation's tragic story of violence and crime.

But because the incident — five shots to the head from a gun allegedly fired by her estranged husband, Al Junior Lewis — happened in the presence of 29 six- and seven-year-old pupils in her classroom, the episode was more than just the routine.

Faced with s situation never confronted before, school officials moved quickly to establish a new level of rapport with the families of the children in the class and offered them counseling of all kinds and any additional help for whatever time that parents and school officials found necessary. But there were no scripts from radio or television to give those involved here peace of mind, in some hours of uncertainty over what is or is not being done to combat an unknown: the impact of children of violence and death.

No answers

For the pupils, it was a confrontation with reality that few people have to face at any age, and no one had solid answers about how school officials, the pupils and their families might cope with the fears generated by death under such circumstances.

"We told them (the parents) that we didn't have all the answers," said John F. Hauck, superintendent of Region 4 of the Detroit public schools. This is the district in northwest Detroit in which Burt Elementary School, where the incident occurred, is situated. Burt is an integrated school in a mostly working-class community of whites and blacks.

"Some parents didn't want to do anything, assuming that the kids would erase this from their minds, but the majority wanted to do something," Hauck said, recalling the first meeting that school officials held with parents several days after the shooting on Nov. 10, 1976.

Psychiatrist helps

To help the parents and children, he and his staff called in Bruce L. Danto, a forensic psychiatrist here who specializes in helping people deal with death and drew upon the expertise of their own social worker and psychologist. To replace Mrs. McCaster, who had been at the school for less than three weeks, they recruited Emma Jean Tillman, a veteran black teacher in the school system who has been innovative in her approach to teaching. She has graduate degrees in learning disabilities and curriculum development.

Within a few days, the students were moved into a different classroom, painted by the parents and stocked with accessories, including pets, by Mrs. Tillman. In the weeks just after the shooting, parents and school personnel began to report behavioral characteristics among some pupils that they felt could be cited as side effects of the incident.

Some parents reported that their children were unable to go to sleep or that some had nightmares, particularly about ghosts. Some children had a fear of going to school. There was bed wetting among a few who had not done so before the incident.

Fear of men

Some children, particularly white girls, displayed a fear of men in general and particularly black men, a response that staff people attributed to the fact that both the victim and her assailant were black. There was one instance in which a white girl became separated from her classmates during a lunch period and upon seeing a black man, one of the teachers, burst into tears and ran to cling to someone.

To try to change that perception of black men, the school janitor, who is balck, has made special trips into the classroom to associate with all the children with special treats such as rides on makeshift buggies.

Although school officials working in supportive positions have made suggestions to the parents about how their families can cope with the problems, parental response has been mixed and unmeasurable. Apparently, much of the decision-making about how to cope has been left to Mrs. Tillman in the classroom and the parents or guardians at home.

There is a considerable difference of opinion among parents over whether the school system did all that it could for the children and their families. Also, some white parents have expressed their opposition to assignment of Mrs. Tillman because she is black.

Police criticized

And the police department, which generally has been complimented for its handling of the case after the first day, was criticized by most of the parents interviewed for isolating the children from their parents until investigators had finished interrogating the pupils about what they saw.

There is also a feeling among some parents and many school officials that the parents have in some cases not helped their children by constantly questioning them at the end of each day about what went on in school that day. One parent remarked that parents may have worried their children into a worse state than they were.

The nightmare of this entire encounter is not over. Lewis, who before the shooting had been in and out of several hospitals, reportedly for psychiatric treatment, is charged with first-degree murder and is scheduled for trial in May. County prosecutors have been unsuccessful in getting him to plead guilty to a lesser charge for a life sentence and thus avoid trial.

Should Lewis go through with his request for a trial it would mean that many, if not all, of the students would have to return to court as they did for a preliminary hearing shortly after the incident, to recreate all over again what happened in the classroom that day.

Byrd vows block of second federal raise

From News Wires

Washington — Senate majority leader Robert Byrd promised Saturday to block a second pay raise scheduled this year for Congress, federal judges and other government officials.

The cost-of-living increase — to range between $2,800 and $3,700 for congressmen — is slated to come automatically in October unless Congress acts to bar it.

Byrd said "action will be taken to knock it out" for congressmen and others who received raises recommended by the Commission on Executive, Legislative and Judicial Salaries.

"If nobody else does, I'll do it," he vowed.

The West Virginia Democrat was a strong supporter of a pay increase that goes into effect March 1, raising the salaries of senators and house members from $44,600 to $57,500 a year.

Byrd said the raise going into effect March 1 was "very reasonable and justifiable" and represented a 29% increase over a period during which the cost of living had risen by 60%.

A similar cost-of-living raise of 5% was to have been added last October. But Congress took action to avoid that raise so close to the election.

The actual amount of the cost-of-living increase scheduled for congressmen in October will be determined later this year.

A bill introduced in the House by Rep. Hal Sawyer, R-Mich., would exempt Congress from the cost-of-living adjustment law.

"It's unique . . . I'm literally privy to all of the information the President is," he said.

Gallup Poll

Carter's initial approval is high

Princeton, N J — President Jimmy Carter starts his term in office with a strong vote of confidence from his fellow Americans

In the first nationwide check on his popularity conducted Feb 4 7 two persons in three (66%) say they approve of the way Carter is handling his job as president, compared to only 8% who disapprove As might be expected, a high proportion of those interviewed, 26%, are undecided at this early juncture

Carter wins a heavy approval rating with all major population groups and in each region of the nation Southerners express the greatest degree of approval He also wins bipartisan approval although an unusually high proportion of Republicans are currently withholding judgment

Carter's initial popularity rating is lower than that given Presidents Gerald Ford, Lyndon Johnson and Harry Truman But each of these men took office at a time of national crisis — Ford following the resignation of Richard Nixon, Johnson and Truman following the deaths of their predecessors

The new President's rating, however, closely parallels the ratings given presidents who have taken office after an election

Course offers taste of history

Oakland, Calif (AP) — For those who believe "You are what you eat," Prof Bert Gordon's college course in food history should be easy to digest

The Mills College course — "A Taste of History" — takes the student back through the ages via menus of the various periods

Gordon's intensive month-long course exposes students to cookbooks, fictional accounts of food-related events, history books and even trips to four restaurants — Greek, Danish, Italian and Basque.

"I think it's very important," Gordon says "I take it very seriously"

Gordon says the history of food is not as cut and dried as it seems In fact, he contends that much of history's flavor lies in dissecting basic social functions — such as eating

For instance what you eat provides a clue to where you see yourself in the social scheme Gordon says In traditional Europe, people who want to raise their status eat white bread rejecting more nutritious brown bread as a sign of the lower classes

In modern America, similarly the boom in wine sales indicates a desire for upward mobility

"It's more chic to drink wine," Gordon said "Beer is thought to be sort of lower middle class and Archie Bunkeresque The rapid growth of the wine industry unquestionably reflects these psychological factors"

He says the recent decline in the consumption of fish resulted from the Catholic Church's lifting its ban on eating meat on Friday And is it coincidence he asks that the Lenten season when people are asked to give up various foods coincides with the season when food supplies normally are low?

"It's hard to come up with one big theory about the effect of cuisine patterns in causing social change," he said "You really have to take cases one at a time"

But social change can be traced to food or its scarcity. Consider the potato, Gordon says. The lack of that commodity in Ireland in 1845 created famine and drove thousands of emigrants to the United States

"People don't eat with their stomachs," he says "They eat with their eyes and minds If we just ate what was good for us we'd be eating seaweed and plankton But we're not and that tells us something"

The charred wreckage of a small aircraft lies heaped in a Saunders County cornfield. Two persons died in the crash, which occurred when the pilot apparently couldn't pull the plane out of a spin.

Two aboard light plane die in Valparaiso crash

Valparaiso (UPI) — A light plane doing acrobatic maneuvers crashed northwest of Valparaiso Saturday, killing the two persons aboard, according to Valparaiso Fire Chief Don Kobza.

Authorities identified the victims as Otto F. Schaap, 58, and his wife, Lois, 48, of rural Ravenna. Officials said the couple had picked up a new airplane in Chicago and stopped in Omaha to attend a wedding shower before taking off again for Ravenna.

Kobza said the small plane crashed at the top of a hill in a cornfield about three miles west and one mile north of Valparaiso, a small town in Saunders County northwest of Lincoln.

The plane burst into flames on impact, and the two victims were burned beyond recognition, Kobza said. Both were trapped inside the wreckage.

Robert Kliment, who farms about two miles east of the crash, said he was watching the plane because it had done a flip over his farm just before the crash.

"The first time, he went into a stall and then went over backwards and came out with a twist," Kliment said. "The last time, he went into the same stall, but he went over on his side and started spinning some and went straight down. He was trying to pull out of it, but he was just too low."

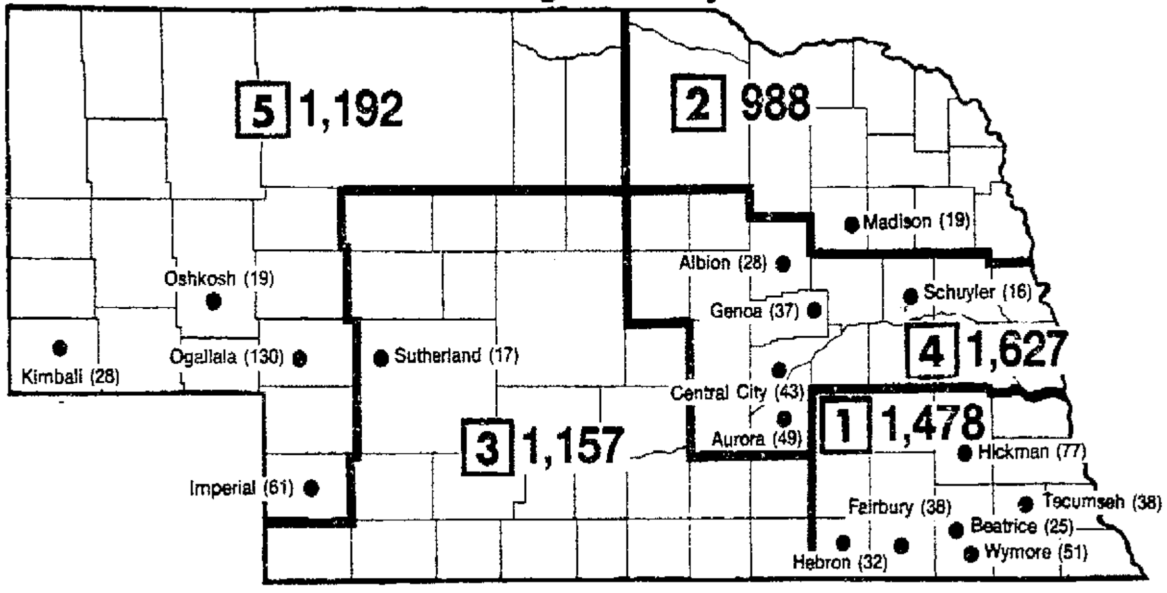
Total FmHA Housing Loans By District



Federal rural housing program has a sweet-sour taste in towns

By Jim Aucoin

A federal rural housing program is causing some Nebraska cities and towns to holler uncle.

Others are saying the Farmers Home Administration (FmHA) is effective in providing much-needed housing in farming communities.

Under the program, up to $29,000 is lent by the U.S. Department of Agriculture (FmHA's parent agency) at interest rates which can be subsidized to as low as 1%. That can provide new three-bedroom homes for only about $90 a month, principal and interest.

Restrictions are a $10,500 adjusted income ceiling, and the house must be located in a town of 10,000 population or less or in no town at all.

(Some selected towns of up to 20,000 are allowed because of their rural character. In Nebraska, they are Beatrice, Scottsbluff, Norfolk, Columbus and Kearney.)

"What we do is rural development," said Lowell Waldo, state FmHA director. "We try to create an environment so that young people will want to stay in rural communities."

Critics contend, however, that most FmHA development is occurring in urban areas rather than in farming communities.

Waldo agrees, to an extent.

Lion's share

"Cities are getting the lion's share of the housing loans, even though maybe there are more dilapidated homes in the country," he said. "But the criticism we hear is urban people saying we're not doing enough for them. Maybe the rural areas don't have spokesmen."

Two other factors were cited by Waldo and Jack Ruff, housing consultant for the State Department of Economic Development: urban areas have larger populations, hence demand is greater; cities have housing developers who are willing to build under the FmHA restrictions, which, in turn, creates interest in the program.

Consequently, new housing developments have sprung up around Lincoln and Omaha, with others planned in Beatrice. Urbanites are enticed by the low monthly payments to buy homes in Hickman, Ceresco, Wahoo, Crete, Waverly and Elkhorn, for example.

The Omaha FmHA office, which serves Douglas, Sarpy and Saunders counties, had on file by far the largest number of loans of any office in the state. As of June 30, 1976, it had 811 loans outstanding. The Lincoln office, which serves Lancaster and Saline counties, was second with 387 loans. Third was the York office (York, Fillmore and Seward counties), which had 267 loans on file.

Unfair advantage

Mike Wiese, growth planner for Omaha, said the program puts the city at an unfair advantage. He explained that FmHA loans are made at a considerably lower interest rate than that available through comparable federal urban programs under the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

By losing city dwellers to the surrounding small towns, Wiese said, the city loses its tax base and the market for older housing units, which, since they go unused, deteriorate quickly.

Congress has shown some concern for the overzealous use of FmHA funds in urban areas. The 1977 housing authorization bill provides for a gradual phaseout of FmHA housing assistance in rural areas that are becoming more urban.

Waldo said implementation of this policy has not been worked out, and he could not say whether Omaha or Lincoln would be affected. "It is probably aimed at larger metropolitan areas," he said, "but it may affect Omaha."

Small towns also have been hit with unexpected consequences from FmHA-financed housing, though many are benefiting from the program.

Clay Center, for example, was able to use the program as a type of small-town redevelopment.

Hoyt: godsend

"It's been a godsend to us," Mayor Wilbur Hoyt said. By confining construction to lots within the town's limits, he said, the tax base was helped without much expense to the taxpayers, since costly new utilities and paving were not needed.

Others are feeling the pinch of new growth. Hickman is wrestling with providing enough water pressure for the more than 70 homes on its outskirts. Elkhorn may have problems supplying education to its new population. And Lancaster Rural Water District No. 1,

Southeast Nebraska Bureau

Going by the adult education roster for Southeast Community College (SCC), the world's knottiest problem has to be macrame. Classes abound everywhere.

There are also such interesting twists as finger weaving and wheat weaving and even good old everyday loom weaving. But maybe your bag is backgammon or bargello. Or batik or tole or mirovision?

SCC still is the place.

Whatever the subject, it either is or could be the focus of one of the college's widely scattered classrooms. Previously escaping notice because it's being handled town by town, adult education has suddenly busted out all over the 15-county area.

23 community programs

Noncredit evening programs currently are under way in 23 area communities, with at least one in every county. That also translates to 350 classes and some 3,300 part-time students.

Add Lincoln with its long-established program and the enrolment approaches 8,300. SCC officials also like to project that to four quarters a year and a likely grand total of about 28,000 adult enrollees.

"We now think it's a realistic goal to think about signing 8 or 10% of our population, which is about 360,000," said SCC President Dr. Robert Eicher. "Self-improvement through adult courses is the most exciting thing in education today and the only way to go is forward."

Although the fun things get the most attention, the greatest impact comes neither from Chinese cooking nor cake decorating nor even extremely popular ballroom dancing. The real life-changers are such occupational courses as welding and typing and food service training.

Meeting the demand

"Actually we have about a 50-50 split in vocational and avocational thrusts," said Dr. Jack Huck of SCC's Community Services Division. "The courses strictly depend upon each community. Our obligation is to meet whatever the demand as best we can."

It wasn't until mid-1975 that SCC began venturing forth from its three campuses at Lincoln, Milford and Fairbury (the latter now includes Beatrice as a satellite). Huck and director Jim Lightbody were specifically assigned the off-campus concept.

A dozen towns participated last year, but the "real mushrooming" began with the '76 fall term. Besides the near doubling of townsites, there has been a greater offering of classes at each.

"Our board views it as part of the community college commission to take services directly to the people who are paying the taxes," said Huck. "At the same time, we're preserving each town's autonomy through local coordinators. It's a matter of joining hands and working together."

York leads list

With the advantage of a previously established program, York and coordinator Rob Anderson lead the current list with more than 400 participants. Other towns hosting programs are Nebraska City, Syracuse, Beatrice, Humboldt, Falls City, Milford, Seward, Crete, Friend, Wahoo, Ashland, Auburn, Geneva, Tecumseh, Sterling, Hebron, Pawnee City, Weeping Water, Louisville, Waverly, Hickman and Fairbury.

SCC also works extensively with perhaps a dozen other agencies in sponsoring a variety of instruction. There is a close link, for example, with the Nebraska Heart Assn. on classes in cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

There also are yoked operations with such agencies as the State Health Dept., mental health groups, community action agencies and county extension services.

"In such cases we function as the 'delivery system', organizing classes and paying instructors," explained Huck. "By cooperating with other agencies instead of fighting them, it makes for some fantastic programs."

Most of the instructors, paid a maximum $9 a teaching hour, are on school staffs within each community. Approximately half the cost of instruction is recovered through tuition.

Specialists commute

But with some 350 classes in operation, there also are a few classroom specialists who commute. Registered dietician Mrs. Kathy Sinner of Lincoln, for example, makes the weekly rounds of Wahoo, Nebraska City, Falls City, Beatrice and York.

The late Wayne Whitney of Lincoln also was a nightly lecturer on his favorite topic of "home horticulture."

"Everywhere he went people had to be turned away," said Huck. "That's adult education at its best and the kind we're getting more of."

Two truck drivers, one picket injured in Iowa Beef Processors plant fighting

Dakota City (UPI) — One man walking the picket lines at the Iowa Beef Processors Inc. (IBP) plant here suffered a broken leg and at least two truck drivers were injured slightly in fighting that broke out early Saturday shortly after union members went on strike.

Dakota County Sheriff Allan Bligh said the altercations occurred as trucks tried to remove meat from the plant.

Bligh said several trucks were damaged in the incidents at the plant gates.

The man who suffered a broken leg was hit by a truck reentering the plant after both windshields had been shattered as the truck was leaving through another gate, Bligh said.

"As he (the truck driver) went through the gate they beat out both of his windshields, so he went to the next gate and came back in," Bligh said. "His vision was impaired and he was unaware of what happened."

At least one other truck driver was cut by flying glass, and Bligh said there were "numerous damage incidents."

The sheriff said he personally escorted several trucks through the plant gates.

Richard Kelly, president of Local 222 of the Amalgamated Meat Cutters & Butcher Workmen of North America, said he had heard that "one of the men on the picket line was run down by a truck," but he had no additional information on the man injured.

About 2,000 union members went on strike against IBP at 12:02 a.m. Saturday, the third time the plant has been closed by labor disputes since 1969.

An eight-month strike in 1969 was marred by bombings, shootings and other violence. The company locked out union members in 197[illegible] after a contract agreement could not be reached, but there was no violence during the six months the company was shut down.

Bligh said he expected "another long night" Saturday night as truckers continued to move meat out of the plant.

One firm which leases space inside the IBP complex, Farm Products Inc., [illegible] operations and pickets were not [illegible] gate reserved for Farm Products employees. The firm [illegible] custom cuts of meat.

Kelly predicted a long strike. He said negotiations [illegible] Chicago with the help of federal mediators, but no [illegible] was reported.

Thone's next political challenge still puzzle to campaigner Orr

By Don Pieper

Include Kay Orr among those anxious to know Charles Thone's political plans.

Mrs. Orr is the Republican congressman's campaign coordinator, but she doesn't know what he is campaigning for.

Thone, in his fourth term as the First District's representative, says he doesn't know either. If he campaigns at all, he says, it will be for governor, senator or reelection to the House. He includes returning to law practice in Lincoln among his options.

But the congressman says it is too early to make a 1978 decision.

Early potshots

Mrs. Orr says she agrees political strategy dictates deferring public announcement too soon. She says that would just set Thone up for early potshots from opponents.

She emphasizes she isn't trying to pressure the boss into a premature decision, but she says she can't deny her curiosity.

Because her job involves checking with Thone's political supporters and potential supporters, she says she talks with many others who share that curiosity.

It's no secret that persons thinking about running for the offices on Thone's list are anxious to know his plans. Some say they won't run against him in a primary, so they are eager to know what primary he will be in.

Kay Orr

Tentative contacts

Thone is making tentative contacts outside the First District. He appeared at the Buffalo County Lincoln Day dinner in Kearney (at which Sen. Robert Dole of Kansas was the speaker) and is expected to attend a similar affair March 5 in Omaha.

The former event was in the Third District; the latter is in the Second.

There are rumors Mrs. Orr, operating out of the Anderson Building office Thone has leased with funds from his political treasury, is using a WATS (wide area telephone service) line to call around the state on his behalf.

The implication is that Thone is interested in a statewide race (either governor or senator) and is broadening his base.

'Plenty of calling'

Mrs. Orr says there isn't any WATS line. She has been doing plenty of calling, but nearly all of it has been to persons within the 27-county First District.

She says she isn't conducting any kind of a statewide survey of opinion on which office Thone should seek, although she does ask that question of persons within the district.

The results, she says, are pretty much split evenly among governor, senator and congressman.

"Nobody wants him to retire," she says.

Mrs. Orr says her basic job now is to keep the Thone First District organization in running order and be ready to expand into the rest of the state if that's what Thone decides he needs.

On names that tongue-twist, just refer to the Thone list

Washington (UPI) — If you have trouble pronouncing the names of some members of Congress — for example, that of Rep. Virginia Smith — help is on the way.

Rep. Charles Thone, R-Neb., has put out a new issue of his handy "Congressional Pronunciation Guide" — and it says that, sure enough, Smith rhymes with "with."

Those who don't want to offend House Speaker Thomas O'Neill should know that his name is pronounced "o-kneel."

Some other toughies: Brooks (brooks), Brown (brown), Dicks (dix), Ford (ford), Jones (joans), Lloyd (loyd) and Long (lawng).

And, according to Thone's guide, Boggs rhymes with "jogs," Craine with "rain," Diggs with "wigs," Evans with "heavens," Dingell with "jingle," Fish with "wish," Keys with "please," Krueger with "cougar," Meeds with "beads," Moss with "toss," Pike with "bike," Rudd with "mud," Stark with "bark," Trible with "dribble," Tucker with "trucker," Vanik with "panic," White with "kite" and Young with "tongue."

Blanchard is pronounced "blan-chard" and rhymes with "can-lard." Cavanaugh is "kav-a-naw" and rhymes with "have a gnaw," and Poague is "pohg" and rhymes with "rogue."

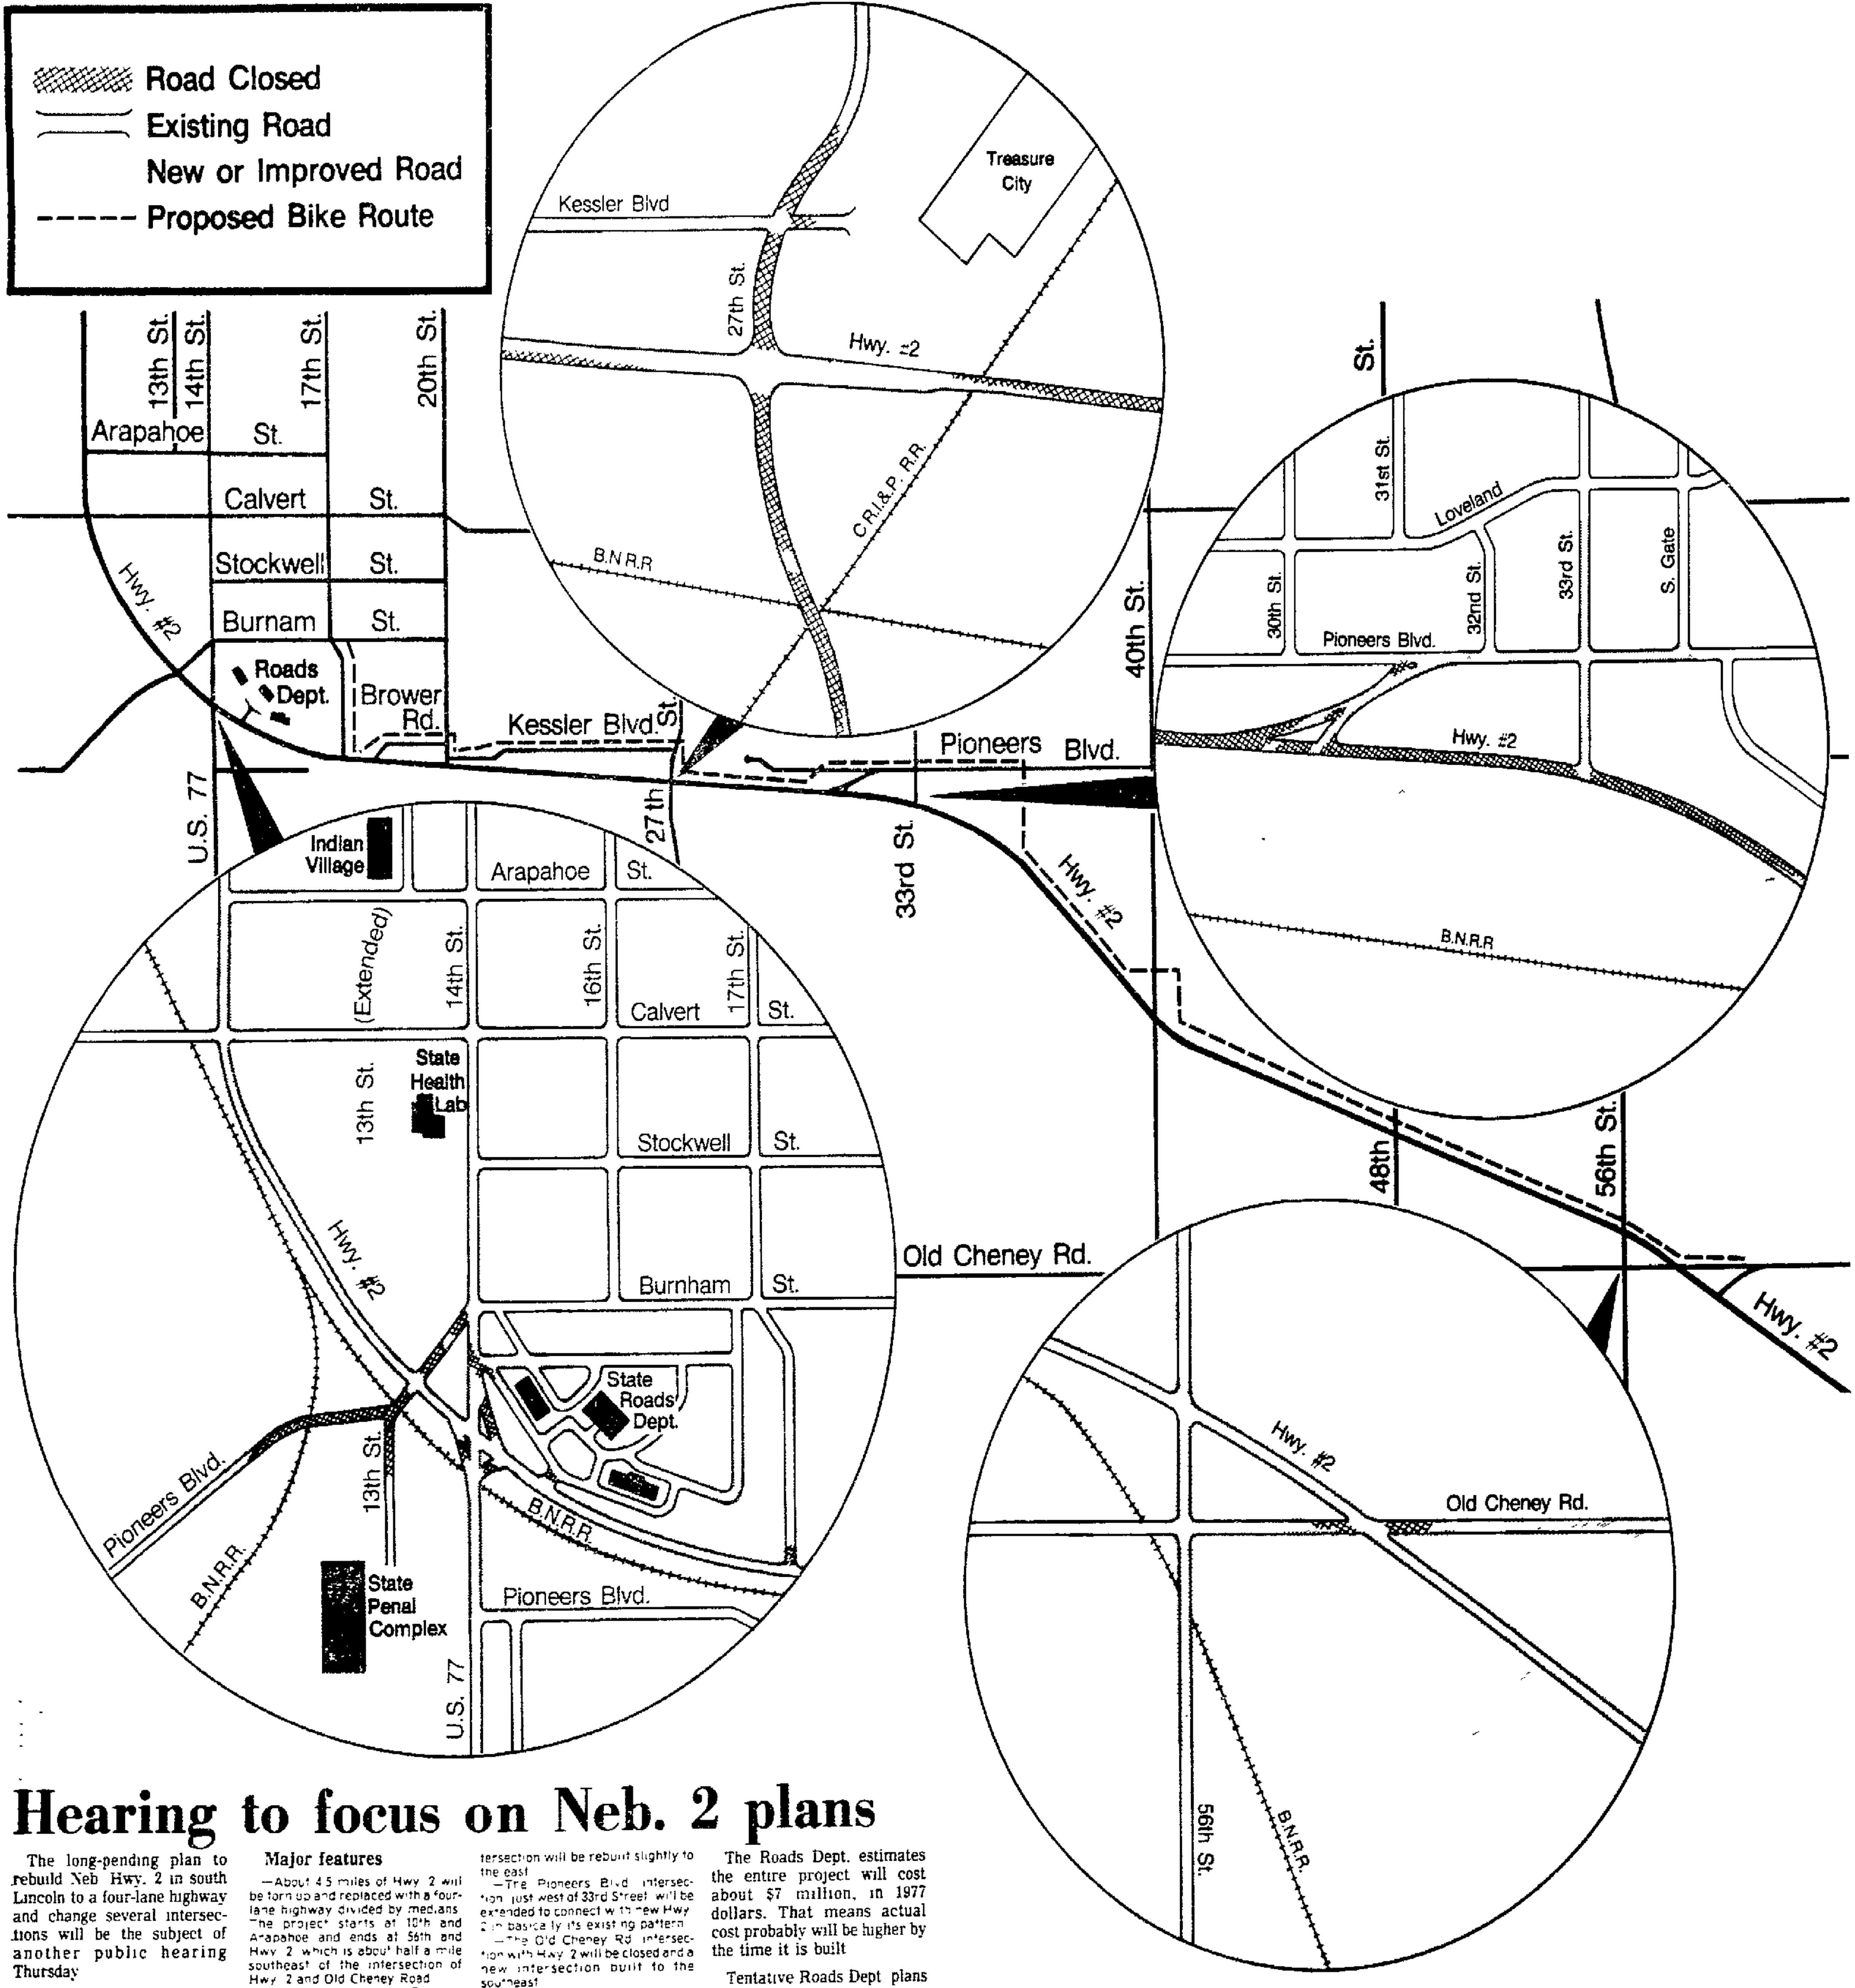
Udall is pronounced "you-dahl." Baucus is "baw-cuss," Cochran is "cock-run," Early is "er-lee," Jacobs is "jay-cubs," Kelly is "kell-ee," and Rogers is "rahj-ers."

Ginn is "not gin," but like "grin."

Ireland is "like the country." Pease is "like the vegetable," and Skelton is "like comedian Red." Stump is "as in tree stump."

Without Thone's guide one might also have trouble with Senate names, such as Domenici (dough-men-uh-chee), Matsunaga (maht-sue-nah-gah), Eagleton (ee-gull-ton), McGovern (mic-guv-urn) and maybe even Church (church) or Humphrey (humfree).

And, oh yes, Thone rhymes with "phone," and Stone rhymes with — that's right — "Thone."



Hearing to focus on Neb. 2 plans

The long-pending plan to rebuild Neb Hwy. 2 in south Lincoln to a four-lane highway and change several intersections will be the subject of another public hearing Thursday

The State Highway Commission and State Roads Dept will hold a hearing on the proposed project at 7 30 p m Thursday at Pound Junior High School. 4740 So. 45th St

The design plan on which citizens have an opportunity to comment is similar to preliminary plans outlined three years ago at a public hearing on location of the road improvements

Major features

—About 4 5 miles of Hwy 2 will be torn up and replaced with a four-lane highway divided by medians The project starts at 10th and Arapahoe and ends at 56th and Hwy 2 which is about half a mile southeast of the intersection of Hwy 2 and Old Cheney Road

—The existing Pioneers Blvd intersection with Hwy 2 will be closed and a new one opened to the west

—The So 14th Street intersection at Hwy 2 and U S 77 will be closed

—So 13th Street will be extended from Arapahoe where it now ends to connect with Hwy 2 at the present 14th Street intersection

—The existing entrance to the Roads Dept and State Patrol headquarters complex will be closed and moved east

—So 16th Street will be extended to connect with Hwy 2

—The So 17th St intersection with Hwy 2 will be closed

—The present So 27th Street intersection will be rebuilt slightly to the east

—The Pioneers Blvd intersection just west of 33rd Street will be extended to connect with new Hwy 2 in basically its existing pattern

—The Old Cheney Rd intersection with Hwy 2 will be closed and a new intersection built to the southeast

—A 4 4 mile bicycle trail will be built as part of the project It will be on existing streets for about half the distance For the remainder the Roads Dept will build an eight foot wide asphalt trail Cost is estimated at around $20 000

—The new four lane highway will be on the existing roadway from 10th and Arapahoe to 27th That means an additional lane on either side of two-lane segments

—From 27th to 38th the new four-lane road will be slightly south of the existing road

—From 38th to 62nd the additional two lanes will be on the north side of the present road

The Roads Dept. estimates the entire project will cost about $7 million, in 1977 dollars. That means actual cost probably will be higher by the time it is built

Tentative Roads Dept plans call for construction to start in calendar 1980. probably taking four years to complete.

The plan is to award the contract for the stretch from 10th and Arapahoe to 38th in 1980, allowing two years for completion

The remaining piece. from 38th to 62nd would be put under contract in 1982. again allowing two years for completion.

Nebraska Votes in Congress

Washington — Votes of area members of Congress on key roll calls for the week ending Feb 25 1977

House

Public Works Jobs By a 295-95 vote the House approved a bill to authorize an additional $4 billion for an antirecession public works program a key part of President Jimmy Carter s economic recovery package

The existing program enacted after two vetoes by President Ford in 1976 allocated $2 billion of grants to state and local governments last December for construction and rehabilitation projects that could begin work within 90 days of funding Approximately 2 000 projects were approved but well over 20 000 applications — with requests totaling $25 billion — were turned down

Supporters of additional public works funds argued the enormous backlog of unfunded applications demonstrates the need for a larger program They claimed the expanded program would create as many as 600 000 jobs in construction and related supply industries

Opponents questioned whether the public works program was an effective means of aiding the economy or putting people to work Most had objected to the program originally as an expensive and slow way to create jobs

Economic Stimulus. The House showed support for Carter s economic stimulus plan by approving a new ceiling on federal government spending for fiscal year 1977 By a 239 169 vote the House increased the spending ceiling for the fiscal year ending Sept 30 1977 to $419 1 billion

The $5 billion increase in the spending ceiling was necessary under congressional budget procedures to allow for the President s economic stimulus package That package includes $50 tax rebates individual and business tax cuts and extra government spending for jobs programs In approving the higher spending ceiling, the House also provided for a deficit of up to $70 3 billion

Supporters argued the economy needed the immediate stimulus proposed by Carter to lower unemployment and sustain the nation's economic recovery

Opponents responded that the size of the stimulus package was too large that it was of questionable value in improving the economy and that the deficit and spending levels were too high

Voting not to increase spending ceiling by $6 billion Smith (R), Thone (R).

Senate

Economic Stimulus By a 72-20 vote the Senate also adopted a budget resolution similar to the one adopted by the House authorizing a higher federal spending ceiling for fiscal year 1977

The two resolutions now go to a joint conference committee to resolve differences

Voting not to increase spending ceiling Curtis (R).

Statehouse Letter

By Don Pieper

State senators' activities diverse

Ah, the state senators. Such a bunch. They amaze and amuse.

There is the politically-ambitious Warren Swigart, age 68

He is running for the Omaha City council. He used to do that all the time He served 15 years before he was first-runnerup in the 1970 council election

Now, with almost two years remaining in his freshman legislative term, Swigart is attempting an Omaha comeback — which could allow the ubiquitous David Stahmer to make a Lincoln comeback

If Swigart becomes a councilman again, he will resign as a senator in June, giving Gov J J Exon a vacancy to fill. Even if Stahmer, who held the seat before Swigart, doesn't get the appointment (he and Exon don't share much other than Democratic voter registration), look for him in the 1978 election He wants back

Stahmer has been a frequent Statehouse visitor this session, appearing on behalf of bills to assist handicapped persons

DeCamp gun-shy?

And, there is Neligh Sen John DeCamp, who says, believe it or not he has become "gun-shy" about publicity He never has been one to avoid a chance to get his name in print

But he hedged and tried to postpone the question recently when asked who had financed the trip to Lincoln of Dr Joel Fort The California author who testified in favor of more liberal marijuana laws at a recent legislative hearing said he appeared at DeCamp's invitation

Although the senator was reluctant to discuss the subject, it was easily discovered that Fort donated his time, that his travel expenses were covered by the National Organization to Reform Marijuana Laws (NORML) and that the Nebraska Civil Liberties Union (NCLU) helped with the arrangements.

NCLU officials were glad to explain the financing.

Savage abstains vote

Sen. John Savage says he will abstain when bills directly affecting the tobacco industry are considered by the Legislature. The Omahan is retained as a public relations consultant by the Nebraska Association of Tobacco Distributors.

He has the parttime job held earlier by another nonsmoking senator, Eugene Mahoney, also of Omaha. Savage says, however, Mahoney didn't "will" him the job when he moved to the directorship of the State Game and Parks Commission

Although he says he reports the status of tobacco bills to his employers, Savage insists he doesn't do any lobbying.

Barnett faces no clogs

Sen. Wally Barnett of Lincoln says he has checked with members of the Conflict of Interest Committee who tell him there isn't any problem with his new partnership with two state employes.

Barnett's fellow incorporators in Woodline, Inc., a firm which makes clogs (wooden-soled shoes with leather tops), are Roscoe Shields Jr., a University of Nebraska-Lincoln professor, and Lou Ninegar, a Kearney State College official who does some lobbying for the college system.

Barnett says he and his partners never discuss legislation.

Political paragraphs

- Sen Ernest Chambers of Omaha, who frequently calls his colleagues cowards who collapse under pressure. laments that their strength of character is so inferior to his
- Gov J J Exon has appointed someone to the Nebraska Accountability and Disclosure Commission who has said "politics is a dirty. rotten, double-crossing racket and that's why I like it " Terry Carpenter, if you hadn't guessed
- Former Sen. George Syas of Omaha is one of several still being considered by Exon for appointment to succeed Art Brown of Omaha on the State Game and Parks Commission Brown's term ended more than a month ago The governor's office says there isn't any problem; Exon just hasn't gotten around to making a selection.
- Sen Ron Cope of Kearney said it the other day during a Budget Committee session: "He who lives by the handout sometimes loses his hand."

Hearing set on groundwater ownership

Three bills dealing with groundwater ownership are among the 54 measures to be heard next week by legislative committees, which will be nearing completion of their hearing schedules.

Midland will increase tuition

Fremont (AP) — Midland College trustees have adopted a 1977-78 budget of $3,733,970, up $403,226 from this school year.

The budget includes a tuition increase of $97.50 per semester and a room increase of $35 per semester. Charges for a full-time resident student will be $3,500 for the 1977-78 school year, the college said.

Housing

which is committed to supplying water for 30 houses now under construction in Cheney, probably is close to its capacity with the planned additional users.

"We can go so far," President Boyne May said, "and when we run out of water, we're out. We won't be able to handle all the development that's going to come out. No way, unless we get more money and another well field."

"The small towns need to stop and think about what they're doing," Waldo said. "We're hesitant to get involved in a development without the city council and mayor knowing about it and approving it. There should be a program giving small communities access to better planning facilities."

More interest

There are indications that outstate rural areas are becoming more interested in the program. A few years ago, Nebraska's FmHA office was sending loan money back to Washington because it couldn't lend all of it.

"Western Nebraska looked to see what was happening elsewhere and realized they were being left high and dry," Waldo said.

Farmers traditionally have been reluctant to accept federal money and have shied from the housing program, he said.

Jerry Rollins, county supervisor for the Ogallala office, emphasized that many farmers do not qualify under the income guidelines and, with equity in their land, can get loans from private lenders.

But outstate builders are becoming interested, and housing developments in such places as Lexington and Madison are attracting FmHA buyers.

Waldo estimated that more FmHA housing loans, in proportion to population, are made outstate. According to FmHA statistics, the 6,442 housing loans on record at the end of June are fairly evenly distributed throughout the state.

Waldo emphasized that FmHA does not promote itself in competition with private lending institutions and that Nebraska's allocation is equally available to all areas in the state on a first come, first served basis.

Nebraska Resources

By Harold Simmons

At any angle, roads face trouble

Regardless of what angle you chose, Nebraska's street and highway improvement program is in financial trouble.

While some people may argue about such things as whether roads are deteriorating, data recently given to state senators suggests Nebraska's great leap forward in road improvements a decade ago may have turned into backsliding.

Senators were told, for example, that the five-year road program adopted for state highways in 1974, actually will take nine years to complete.

That four-year loss in road improvements was caused primarily by inflation, which sharply curtailed the buying power of highway dollars.

What dollars effects?

How has the road dollar been affected? In 1972, the State Roads Dept. had $39.2 million for highway construction and built 400 miles of road. In 1976, the agency had $35.4 million for construction and built only 223 miles of roads.

For the same time frame, highway maintenance costs for the Roads Dept. soared from $21.1 million in 1972 to $34.6 million in 1976.

Because money for construction was building fewer miles of road, senators were told, there was less need for qualified engineers.

The Roads Dept.'s complement of engineers involved in highway design work dropped from 225 in 1972 to 75 at the end of 1976.

While these statistics reflect experiences at the State Roads Dept., senators were told, similar things are occurring in city and county road improvement programs.

Contract not canceled

The Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) hasn't officially canceled its contract to build the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power plant in partnership with the Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD).

But apparently that isn't quite what OPPD is telling the world, both verbally and in writing.

OPPD directors said their cancellations of key contracts for equipment and services to build the plant should be interpreted in only one way: OPPD won't be a partner in building the nuclear plant.

And a preliminary statement OPPD mailed to prospective bond buyers, dated Feb. 17, and approved by the OPPD Board of Directors, said OPPD had acted this month to end its participation in Ft. Calhoun No. 2.

All that is a puzzle to NPPD, which thinks it has a binding contract that says it is 50% owner of a plant that will be built with OPPD.

D. W. Hill, NPPD general manager, sent a letter to OPPD Feb. 4, asking for a clear statement on whether OPPD intends to go ahead and build the plant or whether it intends to cancel out.

No answer

While OPPD officials apparently received his letter, Hill said, no one ever answered it.

These events prompted the NPPD board of directors to give OPPD a 60-day deadline to get moving again on plant construction. That action is provided for in the joint NPPD-OPPD construction contract.

If OPPD doesn't take some action within 60 days, NPPD has the option of hauling OPPD to court for defaulting on the joint contract.

NPPD wants the plant built because it wants the power that would be produced. But if the plant isn't built, it wants the $25.9 million in costs it has incurred to date for plant construction returned by OPPD.

A courtroom confrontation between NPPD and OPPD isn't considered likely by most people involved. But both districts are approaching the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 issue as if they might have to defend their actions in court.

If it's good enough for drivers . . .

Why, since cars are now allowed to make right turns on red after stopping, are not pedestrians allowed to cross on red lights after stopping? If car drivers should be permitted to make their own judgments about whether traffic will allow their action, should pedestrians be permitted less?

—E.D., Lincoln

ACTION LINE: Larry Brage, a city traffic engineer, explained that the distinction is one of degrees. He said it takes so long for a pedestrian to cross a street, the hazards are too great that an automobile would come along before the cross is completed.

Where's Lincoln's Continental?

In November 1968, we purchased a contract from Continental Albums, Inc. of Cedar Rapids, Iowa, which was good for 18 portraits to be taken "two portraits each 12 months for nine contract years beginning on the date of the first sitting." We attempted to contact Continental Albums, but the letter was returned.

Kennedy captures life

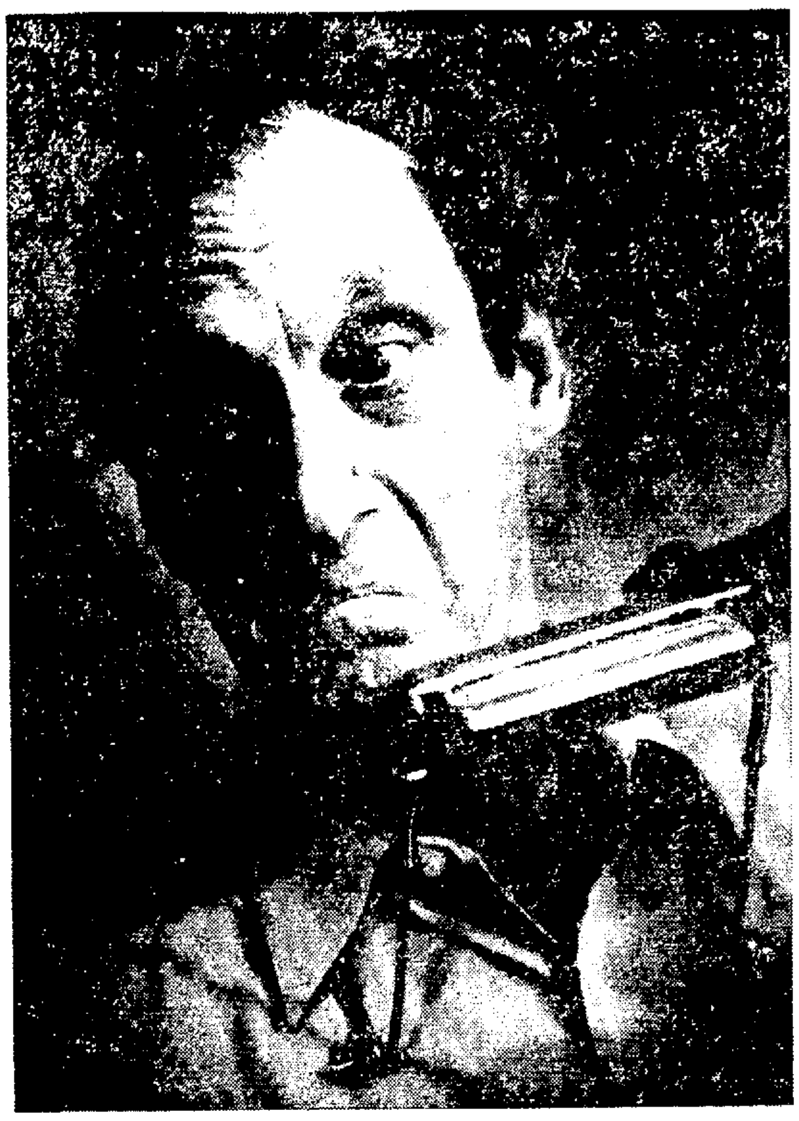
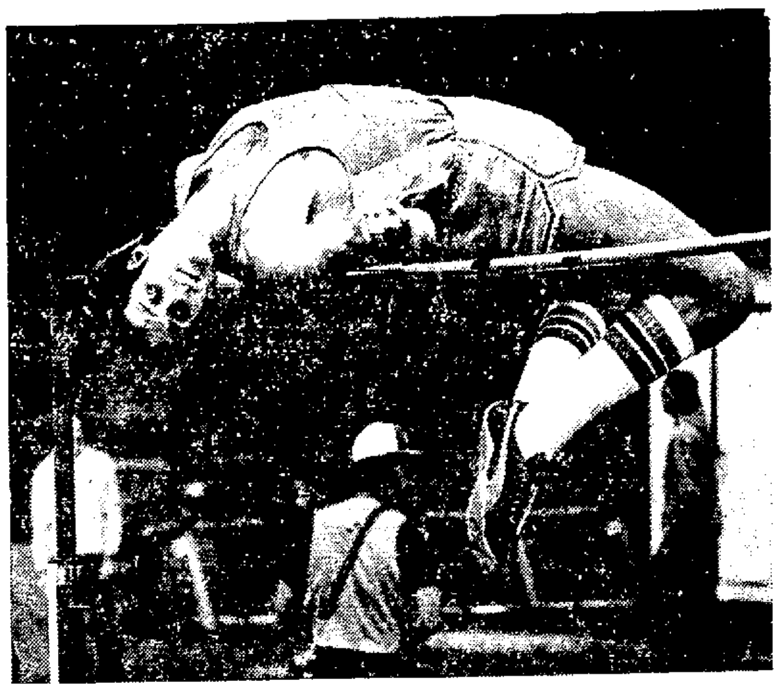
Dave Kennedy





A high jumper clears the bar (above) at a University of Nebraska-Lincoln-hosted track meet. A northeast Lincoln music lover (left) enjoys an evening of fun.

Kennedy, 24, a photographer for the Journal-Star Printing Co. since 1973, said entering a contest makes him analyze his work, to discover both his weak and strong points.

"From this, I've set some new goals for this year," he said.

Kennedy was named the state's top press photographer for 1976 by the Nebraska Press Photographers Assn., a chapter of the National Press Photographers Assn. Kennedy, who has been a member of the state organization for five years, also received six other awards in the association's picture contest. He entered 21 pictures and two photo stories.

Kennedy's favorite pictures from his contest entries are printed on this page. Most originated as assignments for The Lincoln Journal or The Lincoln Star.

Kennedy's photos capture human emotions — effort, dignity, joy.

"I want a picture to tell something about the people and what's going on — to make the viewer think about it," he said.

Feds urged to get into grain reserve business

By Andy Montgomery
Sunday Journal and Star Special

Analysis

Washington — The Congressional Budget Office (CBO) has sent a quiet message to the Carter administration — and most Nebraska farmers won't like it

In a report prepared for the parent Senate and House budget committees it suggests it wouldn't be such a bad idea to get the federal government into the grain reserve business

Down to the manipulation of market prices yet! But all in the name of stabilizing "overall food prices," of course

What's more CBO doesn't think the cost of establishing a grain reserve, "under direct government ownership or control" would be all that great Since it is the creature and servant of a free-spending Congress used to dealing in hundreds of billions of taxpayer dollars, the $2 billion or so it figures would be needed appears to be small potatoes

No options offered

CBO is careful to avoid making a flat-out recommendation That wouldn't be politic But it does avoid offering any other "options" And because the budget committees will set the national spending priorities based on Congressional Budget Office findings, the effect, however, is to signal a green light to the congressional agriculture committees and the Carter administration which must soon confront this issue

The report, "Budget Options for Fiscal Year 1978," was prepared under the supervision of CBO director Alice Rivlin whose name figured prominently in President Carter's search for key economic advisers

The pertinent section in the 202 page report is entitled "protecting consumers from high farm prices," the bureaucratic way of saying let's hold down farm prices

What it amounts to is a subtle revival of the controversial proposal by Kennedy secretary of agriculture Orville Freeman to build government stocks as a mechanism to prevent too high farm prices

"One outcome of the commodity programs of the 1950s and 1960s," the report notes, "was that overall food prices were quite stable," adding

Price fluctuations

"Recent times have shown that greater price fluctuations are possible under current programs when government stocks are diminished and when cropland is more fully exploited"

CBO advises the congressional budget committees to consider the "serious question" "Should policies be adopted that would assure more stable prices and provide both domestic and foreign consumers with protection against sharp price increases?"

It concludes that "a domestic grain reserve, under direct government ownership or control, is an option that could do this"

It notes that "historically, grain stocks of about 60 million metric tons have kept price fluctuations within 20% of average prices Given current expectations about private stocks, a government-controlled grain reserve of perhaps 20 million metric tons could achieve this level of price stability"

CBO figures that "such a stock would involve an acquisition cost of roughly $2 billion and annual storage and interest costs of over $300 million"

However, it feels "receipts from sales could provide some — perhaps a substantial — offset, grain held three years would have to be sold at 150% of its acquisition price for receipts to offset costs"

Federal control

It concedes it would be most difficult to offset costs in this manner, especially in instances of larger stocks

Then comes this most significant observation which can only be interpreted as a call for federal control of market prices through use of grain reserves

"If private carryover stocks remained at current levels, this size government reserve would provide protection against the consequences of highly unstable prices" It allows, however, that "one problem is that those who currently hold private carryover stocks could be encouraged to diminish the size of their stocks If this occurred, the price-dampening effect of the government would be lessened"

Sutherland power plant is opposed by utilities

Columbus — The Nebraska Public Power District (NPPD) is upset over what it believes are deliberate attempts to delay construction of another power plant near Sutherland

Efforts to delay or block power plant construction aren't new in Nebraska It's happened with other proposed plants usually by those concerned about safety and/or environmental issues

What is unusual this time NPPD officials said is that the opposition to the Gerald Gentleman Station No 2 power plant comes from some municipal electric utilities

Opposing the plant are Lincoln Grand Island and Hastings utilities and the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool which represents some two dozen municipal electric systems

Delay costly

Any success in delaying the plant will result in increased construction costs which must be paid by NPPD ratepayers, said John Brogan of York, a member of the NPPD board of directors

Because of that concern, the NPPD board will send a letter to Gov J J Exon and the governing bodies in each of the involved cities explaining what a delay will mean to NPPD ratepayers and asking the cities not to delay the plant

Brogan said the delaying tactics are coming at the hearing before the Nebraska Power Review Board where NPPD is seeking permission to build the plant

The hearing started earlier this month but was recessed so interested utilities could obtain data to support NPPD's claim that it needs the power plant to meet customer demands for electricity

Backup data

Gene Watson, NPPD legal counsel, said representatives of Lincoln, Grand Island, Hastings and the power pool were in Columbus recently and obtained 1 500 pages of backup data from NPPD

However he said that was promptly followed by a request that the power review board continue the hearing once again so the cities could obtain more data from NPPD

The board is scheduled to resume the hearing at 10 a m Monday The first item of business will be the cities request to continue the hearing

The cities maintain they aren't opposed to NPPD building a second power plant at Sutherland as long as it is needed to serve NPPD customers

But the cities said they are concerned that the plant might have an adverse impact on their own future power supply plans

New York City wants a loan

New York (AP) — New York City unable to pay its March bills once again is facing default unless the federal government floats it a $255 million loan city officials say

Officials warn that the city might have trouble acquiring the cash which was formally requested from the federal government Friday by the State Emergency Financial Control Board

Supreme Court case has religious impact

The Seventh-Day Adventist Church has filed a friend of the court brief with the U.S. Supreme Court in the case of Trans World Airlines et al, v. Hardison.

Larry Hardison, a member of the Worldwide Church of God, brought suit against TWA after being fired for refusing to work Friday nights or Saturdays.

"This could be the most significant case to Adventists since the Supreme Court ruled on Sunday-closing laws in 1961," said Warren L. Johns, attorney for the church's General Conference and coauthor of the brief.

Johns said the issue is whether Title VII of the 1964 Civil Rights Act., which prohibits religious discrimination, can be construed as an establishment of religion, which is prohibited by the First Amendment.

Although a district court ruled against Hardison, an appeals court ruled in his favor. The Supreme Court is expected to decide the issue later this spring.

Johns said if the high court rules that the establishment of religion prohibition has been violated, there could be a radical impact on the free exercise of religious rights in the United States.

World Day for Prayers will be observed Friday

World Day of Prayer Services, beginning at dawn in islands of the Pacific Ocean and ending at dusk in islands off the coast of Alaska, will be held in Lincoln Friday.

Church Women United will meet at 10 a.m. at Holy Trinity Church, 6001 A St., to hear the Rev. James Stillman, Nebraska Wesleyan University chaplain, speak on the day's theme, "Love in Action."

Stillman also will speak at 7:30 p.m. at First United Methodist Church, 50th and St. Paul Sts. The service follows a 6:30 p.m. dinner at the church.

In addition, afternoon services will be held in 15 area nursing homes.

Twenty-five members of Church Women United from the United States will celebrate the day in Ireland with that country's peace movement. The Americans, eight Catholics and 17 Protestants from nine denominations, will bring a contribution from Church Women United to centers for reconciliation at Glen Cree and Cowrymeela.

The women plan to stay for the Peace Week in March, headed by Betty Williams and Mairead Corrigan, two women leading the peace movement there.

Iowa takes electronic bank leap

By Gene Kelly

Dale Dooley has had a secret smile on his lips all week in Des Moines. You might call it an electronic smile for Dooley figuratively threw the switch last Monday on the nation's first statewide electronic banking network

Banking in Iowa and the U. S. will never quite be the same again. No one knows this better than Dooley, executive director of ITS (Iowa Transfer System)

A group of 300 Nebraska bankers had planned to be first to activate such a statewide network. But NETS (Nebraska Electronic Transfer System) won't be tested for several months, says James Bartel of Lincoln, its executive director

Limited tests of the Iowa network, which lets bank customers make deposits, withdrawals and transfers of funds using "shared" terminals in stores and bank lobbies, began on Valentine's Day

It went into "live operation" this week for seven banks, three data processing centers and 28 terminals in retail outlets. Although employes of these firms are using the network now, Dooley says he won't begin a media campaign to encourage widespread use by bank customers until March 1.

"We want to keep our activity very low, to verify the results and catch any problems," he explained.

Tuesday the system will be expanded to 33 Iowa banks, five processing centers and 72 terminals.

By the end of the year, some 180 to 200 terminals should be in use across Iowa. "We know of that many firm orders," Dooley says.

Twice that many terminals should be in use in Nebraska by late in 1977, says Kermit Hansen, NETS president. The five largest banks in the state (three in Omaha, two in Lincoln) are already using more than 60 manned terminals in stores and automatic teller machines in bank lobbies.

Way, Way Ahead

The nucleus of both the Iowa and Nebraska networks is electronic switching center hardware located in Des Moines and Omaha. These "switches" transfer information about a deposit or withdrawal made at a terminal to the customer's bank.

Executives of the two networks met recently in Sioux City to discuss the first linkup of statewide electronic banking networks.

"We're not certain how quickly we could interface the switches so they can start communicating with each other," Hansen says.

However, the two banking groups have very positive attitudes about working together, adds Hansen, also board chairman of U.S. National Bank, Omaha.

Iowa and Nebraska bankers are "way, way ahead" of their contemporaries in other states, Bartel says candidly. "The electronic transfer of funds is going to snowball. During the next five to 10 years it's going to be the major happening, both in the financial and data processing communities," he predicted.

In Iowa, electronic banking is regulated by legislation which says that terminals not on bank property must be shared with anyone having an ITS plastic transaction card. Individual banks have issued these by the thousands and run their own systems until now.

James Bartel

Nebraska's NETS network won't be first, but Bartel wants it to be 'the most successful' in America.

Iowa statutes say that sharing the terminals with other financial institutions is permissive, but not mandatory.

Dooley says ITS officials have made no decision on this point. "We've been too damn busy," he explains. "This has been a monumental coordination task . . . frankly, no S&Ls or credit unions have asked us to share, as yet"

Nebraska's electronic banking laws don't permit other financial institutions to use the NETS terminals.

Variations of mandatory sharing are written into electronic banking statutes in 17 states. Twenty-seven states have passed EFTS legislation (electronic funds transfer).

The NETS banking group is waiting for a final ruling expected later this week, from the U.S. Justice Dept., on whether antitrust laws might be violated by such a network.

It's expected that NETS will get a nod from the Justice Dept., since S&Ls, credit unions and even banks can become part of other fund transfer systems such as The Money Service, pioneered by First Federal Savings and Loan of Lincoln.

Hansen says Justice Dept. attorneys have indicated a strong belief that "mandatory sharing is the only way to go.

"They're also firm on two other points: that electronic funds transfer systems should be part of very open and competitive business practices.

Not a Super Bank

"And that such networks shouldn't be confined to individual states or geographic areas. They should be linked for through-switching — eventually on a nationwide scale, to make use of their full potential."

This is not a super bank taking shape, Bartel says. The networks will merely handle the electronic switching of transactions from one bank to another, or between the customer terminal and the bank.

No loans will be dispensed.

ITS and similar banking organizations won't be setting policy for banks. "Such electronic networks should foster, rather than hinder, competitive correspondent bank concept," Bartel says. "They're a prime example of how the free enterprise system can work."

What about costs? ITS is nonprofit; banks bought memberships voluntarily, paying fees based on the size of their deposits.

In Nebraska, the next step is an extensive consumer marketing program, to begin in April, focusing on "benefits of the NETS concept," Hansen says.

Bartel's goal for NETS is not just to be among the first such banking systems, but to "be the most successful . . ."

Successful for bankers, merchants and their customers.

The consumer is going to have virtual, 24-hour access to his money, almost anywhere in Nebraska," he predicts.

Hansen would be happy if one short-range objective could be reached quickly in Nebraska: a 30% reduction in the use of checks.

Retail-Office Complex Opens

Twin Oaks Corner

Twin Oaks Corner, a retail-office complex at 48th and Vine in Lincoln, staged a grand opening yesterday.

Roy Sheaff, who, with his son, John, owns the 14,000 sq. ft. building, said the six-month building, said the six-month major remodeling of the former Umberger-Sheaff mortuary east of K-Mart resulted in a "new image" for the area.

The mortuary was virtually gutted, the old rear of the building given a new face and space developed for eight businesses plus offices for Roy, an attorney, and the Umberger-Sheaff Corp.

A 10,000 sq. ft. second stage will be added east of the building, beginning this spring.

Tenants include three new Lincoln firms: Ruse's Home Decorating, owned by Larry Ruse; Decor by Michael's, owned by Larry Truhlicka, and ALCOM, a specialized electronics shop owned by Harold Gossell.

New in Town

EFT Conference

The subject of electronic funds transfer (EFT) will be the focal point for a conference of savings and loan executives from a seven-state area, to be held at the Nebraska Center Thursday.

Short and long-term aspects of EFT systems and alternatives will be discussed at the session, co-sponsored by the University of Nebraska Extension Division and the TMS Corporation of the Americas, a subsidiary of First Federal Lincoln.

Hallmark House of cards second generation empire

By Robert Holden

New York (AP) — Don Hall, 48, is busily adding rooms to the house of cards that his father built.

Hall is president of Hallmark Cards founded in 1910 as a regional picture postcard distributorship by his father, Joyce Hall, now 85 and chairman of the multimillion-dollar enterprise in sentiment.

"Greeting cards are still the stable base of our business," Don Hall says, contributing more than 50% to the company's estimated $500 million in annual sales. The closely-held company does not disclose exact sales or profits.

Since taking over as president of the world's largest greeting card company in 1966, Hall has helped develop a nationwide network of independently owned "social expression" shops that feature Hallmark cards and a wide range of related Hallmark items such as candles, gift wrapping, gift books and jigsaw puzzles. Sales tripled in the 1960s as the product line swelled, Hall says.

But there's another side to the card company — the $400 million commercial-residential complex in Kansas City, Mo., called Crown Center.

Hallmark is the owner-developer of the 50-building project, which is designed to accommodate a daytime population of 75,000, including 8,000 permanent residents. The complex, being built on 85 acres of former urban blight that had surrounded Hallmark's headquarters, already includes a 730-room hotel.

Joyce Hall came up with the idea for Crown Center in 1955, and his son has dedicated himself to completing it since ground was broken in 1968.

And the younger Hall's role in the project was cited recently at a dinner in New York City where he was given the Parsons School of Design award for extraordinary contributions to the arts and culture.

It was the latest of many such awards for the modest, soft-spoken Hall, who was named Kansas City's man of the year in 1972 by the local Chamber of Commerce.

Securities decline is modest

The Dow Jones industrial average fell 6.81 points to 933.43, the seventh weekly loss in eight weeks this year. At this point, the Dow is 71.36 points below its 1976 close.

The NYSE common stock index dropped 0.59 to 54.09 and Standard & Poor's 500-stock index, containing some overthe-counter stocks, shed 1.01 to 99.48. Declines routed advances, 1,272 to 558, among the 2,081 issues crossing the composite tape.

Volume during the four-day week — the market was closed Monday in observance of George Washington's birthday — totaled 73,324,900 shares, compared with 101,371,170 the previous week and 161,787,900 during the same week a year ago, which was the second busiest week in NYSE history.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all exchanges totaled 86,459,920 shares, compared with 119,372,420 the previous week.

Selling pressure appeared to ease a bit last week. But there was no money to spark a prolonged period of bargain hunting. Many investors appeared to have put their money in bonds and short-term money instruments.

Generally, analysts said Wall Street foresees inflation in the coming months if Congress expands President Carter's $31.2 billion economic stimulus program. Some even think the Carter program itself is inflationary.

Arthur F. Burns, Federal Reserve Board chairman, said Wednesday he did not think inflation will be trimmed this year. Further, he said he thought the business community lacked confidence in the economy because the government was increasing the federal budget deficit.

Bert Lance, Carter's budget chief, also is concerned about inflation and urged the congressional Joint Economic Committee not to add too much to the President's package.

But Congress is in the process of doing just that. Both houses have approved budget deficits greater than the Carter record $68 billion proposed for fiscal 1977. Both houses also passed Carter's $4 billion public works program, but each added some extras that will have to be resolved in a conference committee.

Analysts said the larger the government's deficit, the more it will have to borrow. This, some said, will disrupt money markets by forcing interest rates higher and making stocks less attractive.

Lance also said he thought the effects of the worst winter since 1918 on the economy will be minimal and that the economy will pick up steam by the third quarter.

Wall Street was concerned the drouth in the West and the cold-weather damage to crops in the East will force up consumer prices. Some analysts, noting the January Consumer Price Index rose at a 9.6 per cent annual rate, said they thought the next figures will show a double-digit increase in the annual rate.

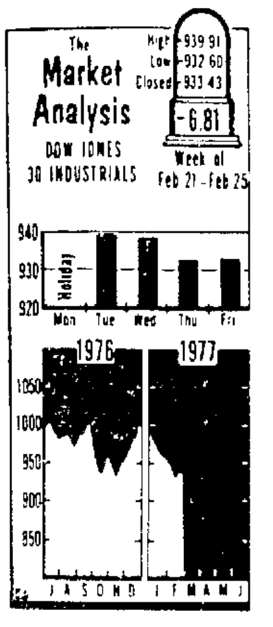
Government reports so far show durable goods orders dropped 4 per cent in January, the sharpest decline in 25 months. Housing starts plunged 27 per cent, industrial production fell 1 per cent and spendable income dropped 1.1 per cent.

Observers are waiting for the details of Carter's energy program, which he has said will require some sacrifices. Wall Street was disturbed by Sen. Birch Bayh's bill to breakup large oil companies.

Several oil and related issues, which had registered strong gains during the past several weeks, were hard hit by profit taking and selling in response to congressional actions.

Superior Oil, one of the most volatile NYSE issues, plunged 10 to 219, Southland Royalty 3¼ to 38¾, Phillips Petroleum 3 to 56¾ and Atlantic Richfield 2⅞ to 53¼.

Inexco Oil, the second most active NYSE-listed issue, fell 3⅝ to 18⅞ on 859,400 shares.



The Dow Jones average closed at 933.43 Friday, down 6.81 from the week prior. Analysts attributed the listless market to investor concern over rising interest and fear of resurging inflation.

Heifers, steers lower

Omaha (UPI) — There were few signs of price strength in the market on slaughter steers and heifers the past week at Omaha, according to the Omaha Livestock Foundation.

The end product, it said, was 50¢ to $1 lower on fed steers and 50-75¢ lower on heifers.

The Omaha steer top for the week was 38.65. A range of 38.25-38.65 was paid in early week action on choice and prime 1075-1225 lb Yield Grade 3 and 4 steers. Similar cattle at midweek, including some choice Yield Grade 3s, sold to a top of 38.25. The going rate on most choice cattle was 36.75-38.00.

Mixed good and choice brought 36.25-37.00, goods 32.50-36.00 and standard and good steers 31.00-32.50.

Heifer top was 37.35, paid early on five loads of choice and prime heifers weighing 1,003-1,094 lb. similar heifers at midweek were 37.00. Most choice heifers during the week brought 35.75-36.75, mixed good and choice 34.50-35.50, and good 31.00-34.00.

Utility and commercial cows closed at 24.00-25.50, a few to 26.00. The high on cows was 27.00 Wednesday. Bulls sold firm with a 35.00 high.

The butcher hog market had some sharp ups and downs, especially the closing two days and netted out about 50¢ lower after fluctuations of 1.00 or more. Butcher top of 41.75 was paid Thursday. But a Friday decline took most of the gain for a closing top of 40.75. Most 200-300 lb butcher sales last week were in the 37.00-41.50 range.

Bulk of sow sales were at 35.50-36.00. The top was 37.25 during Monday's opening round.

Feeder Cattle

Omaha (UPI) — Trading of feeder cattle and calves across the nation last week appeared to be following the tracks of a dull slaughter market as most points reported sales in the steady to $2 lower range, the National Livestock Feeders Assn. said.

The eight river markets with 22,000 head: choice, some prime, thin and framey 350-500 lb steer calves 41.00-44.00 with Kansas City to 48.50; 500-655 lb 39.00-42.00 with Sioux City to 43.00; 700-750 lb steers 37.00-39.00; choice 300-500 lb steer calves 38.00-42.00; 500-600 lb steers 37.00-40.00; choice 600-700 lb steers 37.00-39.50 but Fargo down to 35.00; 700-800 lb steers 36.00-38.00; fleshy, partly fattened 800-1080 lb steers 35.00-37.00; choice, some prime, 325-500 lb heifer calves 35.00-36.75 with Sioux Falls to 38.00; 500-700 lb heifers 30.00-34.50 but Sioux Falls to 35.80; fleshy, partly fattened 700-900 lb heifers largely 30.00-34.00.

Wheat lower

Chicago (UPI) — Wheat was substantially lower, corn irregularly lower, oats mixed and soybeans irregularly higher last week on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was off 4¾ to 5¾¢; corn off 1¾ to 3¼; oats up 1¼ to off 1½; and soybeans up 2 to 18½.

Higher soybeans futures prices resulted primarily from Wednesday's activity, which was based on export inspections released by the government showing a sharper increase in beans last month than most sources expected.

Exports also contributed to some early-week support for wheat, but the figures for corn came up slightly bearish by comparison and did not stimulate much buying action except in sympathy with soybeans.

Moisture deficiencies reported over many growing areas were eased by rain and snow at midweek. But there was considerable speculation over whether there was enough precipitation to offset stories of dust storms, lowered water tables and wide-range shifts in topsoil blown away by the high, dry winds.

Some tempering in the weather outlook came late in the week on forecasts of scattered showers in some of the regions where there are dry soil problems and some fears that the valuable topsoil might vanish in the winds.

By Friday trade in wheat and corn turned slow and cautious with some profit-taking evident early in the session, a trend set by the action in the soybeans pit.

Arabs are building castles in Spain

New York (UPI) — The Arabs, who were driven out of the realm by Ferdinand and Isabella 500 years ago, again are building castles in Spain

The modern Arabs are descendants of the same kind of people who comprised the Moorish kingdom of Granada, which was defeated in a great battle in 1492, the same year that Queen Isabella's protege, Christopher Columbus, reached the Americas

Now, says David Mizrahi, editor of Mideast Report, a New York newsletter, oil-rich Arabs are buying real estate all over Spain with the enthusiastic approval of King Juan Carlos's government

The Spaniards are delighted at the inflow of Arab money because Spain has $15 billion in long-term external debt, which is a lot for an essentially poor country. The interest burden alone is running $1 5 billion a year.

So. says editor Mizrahi, the Spaniards are hoping for loans from the oil-rich Arabs in addition to the many millions of dollars they are investing in the kingdom

Arabs are really buying and building the modern equivalent of castles in Spain, first class apartments and villas in Madrid and in the southern coastal resorts of Malaga There is one Arab-financed project to build a new community all in Moorish architecture between the seashore resorts of Marbella and Estepona on Spain's Costa Del Sol facing Africa from whence the original Moors came to conquer much of Spain in the decades of the great westward sweep of Islam after Mahomet's death

Airline industry rebounds

New York (AP) — The nation's airline industry which has been cutting costs and juggling fares to win back passengers and profits has rebounded strongly from the depressed levels of 1975 and is looking toward a healthy 1977

The industry has staged a significant comeback from the corrosive effects of the recession said Julius Maldutis a vice president and transportation specialist with the investment banking firm of Salomon Brothers

When all the earnings reports for last year are in, the 11 major airlines may show a total profit of $350 million in 1976 from a loss of $100 million overall in 1975, Maldutis said

Bad bounces, Jayhawks end Husker season, 61-58

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

Lawrence, Kan. — Brian Banks was disappointed about two things — the game's outcome and his free throw shooting. And unfortunately for Nebraska, one greatly influenced the other.

"That's the worst free throw shooting I've ever had," sadly noted the 6-1 sophomore guard after Kansas stopped Nebraska, 61-58, here Saturday afternoon at Allen Field House in a first-round game of the Big Eight's Post Season Basketball Tournament.

"They sure were costly," Banks said. "I thought I had it down after halftime (in the pre-second half warmup), but I guess I didn't."

Banks, who missed four of five first-half free throws, misfired on the front end of a crucial one-and-one situation with 2:25 to play. The score was tied 56-all then.

Banks had been an accurate free thrower all season. Entering the regionally-televised game, he had been connecting at a 69.1 percentage.

"We just didn't capitalize on the foul trouble we had them in," he said. "We didn't take it to them in the second half. We didn't make them work us as hard as we worked against them.

"I didn't want our season to end like that on a couple of bad breaks," he said of NU's final 15-14 record.

While Banks was not at his best at the free throw line, Nebraska had more than enough opportunities to win this contest viewed by a sparse KU turnout announced as 6,870.

"We sure had our chances," lamented NU head coach Joe Cipriano. "Our tip doesn't go and Kansas' does. Our free throws don't go in and theirs do. We missed a one-and-one there at the end. Then we lost the ball on our delay game."

The Huskers led 49-44 with 8:47 to play. Cipriano admitted he was considering using the NU "four-corner" game to protect the lead at that point.

But he didn't. The Huskers decided to use it with a 56-54 lead and the basketball with 4:33 to play.

NU chopped 1:40 off the clock, but then Herb Nobles, KU's 6-7 senior forward, deflected a pass and recovered the ball . . . it was all downhill for Nebraska after that.

Ken Koenigs hit two free throws to tie the score at 56-all with 2:27 and then a John Douglas layin and free throws from Milt Gibson (one) and two from Brad Sanders sent Kansas to Kemper Arena in Kansas City, Mo. for a thursday night tournament semifinal.

"Our delay game has been pretty effective and KU's big men help us," Cipriano said. "We had a two-point lead and the ball. If we had hit some clutch free throws, we could have won.

"I don't think we handled the ball as well as we could have when we got ahead," he added. "I was unhappy about our shot selection when we got ahead. It wasn't a fun way to end the season.

"But I'm proud of our team. They had to work hard on defense the whole year and they gave as good an effort as any group that I've been associated with in 14 years at Nebraska," he continued.

Carl McPipe, NU's 6-8 center who scored 18 points and took game honors with 13 rebounds, termed the loss disappointing "because we lost a game we hoped would take us as far as it could.

"I had an idea we wouldn't keep that lead when we got it. The homecourt advantage is really something here," he said.

"I guess we could have done some other things, but it just goes to show you we didn't. We just have to get ready and come back next year and win the Big Eight AND the post-season tournament," he said.

The big statistical edge in fouls went to Nebraska — 22 KU personal fouls to 15 for Nebraska. By halftime, Koenigs, an integral part of the KU attack, had four personals and forward Clint Johnson had three.

The Jayhawks had 11 steals to none for the Huskers. Yet it was NU's inability to hold a lead that proved costly again.

"We kind of ran out of gas at the end. That's sort of been our trademark this season," noted junior forward Terry Novak. "It caught up with us again. We seemed to get careless when we get a five-or six-point lead

"We stand around and when you stand around you have to go one-on-one and it got us into trouble," said the former Lincoln Northeast standout.

Noting the 25 turnovers (14 by NU), KU head coach Ted Owens said "all the marbles are on the table. Both teams were a little tight. We hesitated on shooting the good shots.

"I was pleased that we were getting good open shots, but they weren't going in (KU hit 25 of 66 field goals for 37.9 per cent)," he said.

Owens said he expected the Huskers to employ the delay game and drilled the Jayhawks during the last two practices. "I thought that they would do it at any time during the game," he said.

He was correct.

For Kansas, the win boosted its record to 18-9. For Nebraska the game marked the end of the season — a season the Huskers felt didn't have to end at Allen Field House.

Kansas won the 49th running of the Big Eight Conference Indoor Track Championships at the Sports Center Saturday afternoon. It marked the eighth team title for the Jayhawks in the last 12 years.

But don't think that made it a ho-hum affair. A sellout crowd of 5,185 saw a super show. And, it was announced the meet will return to Nebraska's sparkling new facility again next winter.

The partisan Nebraska crowd had plenty to shout about. While Oklahoma earned runnerup laurels, Cornhusker coach Frank Sevigne's thinclads finished a solid third.

Husker hurdler Jeff Lee was the meet's only double winner, capturing both the highs and lows and dethroning defending low hurdle champion John Garrison of Oklahoma in the process.

Garrison, who was also the defending champ in the 60-yard dash, was nipped in that event by Kevin Newell of Kansas in what Jayhawk coach Bob Timmons called a "critical race which helped set the trend for the afternoon."

The short dash was the second event on the program and featured three sprinters from Kansas and three from Oklahoma in the final field.

"I don't suppose any of us — including Kevin — thought he could beat Garrison," Timmons admitted. "But, when he did, and we also got third and fourth in that race, it got us off to a good start."

Timmons called the pole vault another crucial point in deciding the team title. "The win by Tad Scales took on added importance since the next two behind him were both from Oklahoma."

Two performers completed a rare three-year sweep of their favorite event. Bob Prince of Kansas State, who won the 880 as a sophomore, both the 600 and 880 last year and also became the national half-mile champion in 1976, captured the 880 for the third time in a row with a record-setting clocking of 1:50.34.

Oklahoma's Randy Wilson duplicated the feat by winning the 1,000-yard run for the third straight time.

Three new records — technically four — went into the books during the afternoon.

In addition to Prince in the half-mile, Stan Vernon of Oklahoma State obliterated the two-mile mark. He cruised to a 8:43.4 clocking, besting the six-year old record by seven seconds.

Another record came in a thrilling mile relay race between Nebraska and Kansas which climaxed the afternoon's program.

The Huskers' Tom Dovel, who earlier had run a career best to place third in the 600-yard run, established a narrow lead for Nebraska after the first leg. Pat McKenzie and Ray Mahoney held on to the slim margin to set the stage for the anchor leg race between Husker freshman Scott Poehling and Kansas senior Jay Wagner.

The same pair had earlier locked horns in the 600. In that race, Wagner held off a Poehling bid at the start of the gun lap to win going away, with Poehling second and Dovel third

In the mile relay, Wagner scorched the Sports Center's new artificial surface with a :47.2 quarter. He overhauled Poehling on the back stretch of the final lap.

Kansas was timed in 3:14.15, besting the old record by more than a second

Nebraska was also under the old record at 3:14.[illegible], which is the sixth-best in the country, and qualified the Husker quartet for the NCAA championships to be held in Detroit in March

Steve Nootz had a selfish reason for wanting to snap Omaha Westside's state championship swimming reign at seven years Saturday.

"Westside would have tied our record of eight straight," Nootz said after his Knights cut the Warriors off at the pass by 26 points before 1,500 fans at the NU Sports Center.

"This victory swim is the best I've experienced," Nootz said. "It's a dream come true. My team about half drowned me. I guess they're getting back at me for the over 400 miles of workouts they've had this season."

Sharpe honored

The only disappointment Nootz felt was when Omaha Westside's Chuck Sharpe won the outstanding swimmer award over his own Jay Merritt and Jim Weyhrauch.

Sharpe and Merritt each set two state records and posted times earning all-American consideration. Weyhrauch had no part in setting records in eight events Saturday, but he led a vital 49-point windfall in diving and finished second in the 100-yard freestyle.

"I'm a little disappointed," admitted Merritt, who broke his own state 50-yard freestyle record, then established a new state mark in the 100-yard backstroke.

"Sharpe won the outstanding swimmer award as a sophomore, so I thought it might be my turn, especially since I beat last year's 50 time by a second," Merritt said. "But I'm more excited about the team championship. That means a lot more to everyone."

Sharpe, who broke his own state records in the 100- and 200-yard freestyles, seriously threatened the national prep mark in the 200.

National record pressed

The 6-3, 165-pound Westside senior whisked to a 1:39.242 clocking. The national record is 1:38.807 by Richard Hannula of Tacoma, Wash., set three years ago.

"I've been working hard all season long for this," offered Sharpe, who also anchored Westside's record-setting 400-yard freestyle relay.

"I have no mixed emotions at all," Sharpe said when pressed about the Warriors' runner-up finish. "Southeast has a lot of good individuals. They did a heckuva job, especially in diving. That hurt the most."

Weyhrauch led Southeast's 1-3-4-5 finish in diving. Nootz believes that's the first time in Nebraska prep swimming history that four athletes from the same school finished in the top six in any event.

"Our team has been counting on the divers all year long," Weyhrauch observed. "It meant more to me to have four in the top six than my winning it.

"We divers are all kind of crazy. We're rowdier than the swimmers, but they look to us for leadership and count on us. When he start hitting our dives, there's no stopping us. Don Gibbens had failed a double twister in both conference meets, but he didn't today. That's teamwork."

Merritt, Southeast's 6-3½ senior wearing a pair of faded Westside trunks, said excitement caused him to shed 10 pounds this week.

"Now, I know how Westside feels," he said. "Last year, I talked about how they over-celebrated. I was depressed at losing. Now I can see in a different light."

Dave Killen also missed breaking a record Saturday, but the Southeast junior repeated as 500-yard freestyle champion.

Westside salvaged a measure of consolation in defeat when Scott Mactier and Rick Rhodes set state records in the 200 individual medley and the 100 breaststroke, respectively.

Creighton Prep, finishing a surprising third, accounted for the other state record in the 200 medley relay. Prep's Bill Crampton manufactured the program's biggest upset, beating defending champion and state record-holder Mactier in the 100 butterfly.

Bentz staying in Omaha

"We will be back again next year," Westside coach Cal Bentz said after the Warriors suffered only their second state swimming loss in 12 years.

"Westside will be back and I will be back next year," Bentz said, spiking rumors he might become Iowa State's head swimming coach.

"I'm really excited about next year. We had four seniors and seven underclassmen competing out there today. You can't get rid of Westside High School."

Nootz called the championship the peak of his five years at Southeast.

"I've already promised this team a 10-year reunion, but right now I plan to sit back and enjoy this the rest of the year."

Pius X cagers eliminated

By Ken Hambleton
Staff Sports Writer

Wahoo — Plattsmouth relies on a run-and-gun offense according to coach Dan Arnold. But the Blue Devils had to depend upon free throws to eliminate Lincoln pius X, 56-53, Saturday afternoon in the Class B-2 district at Neumann High.

In the other afternoon game, top-seeded Gretna nipped Waverly, 46-43, on a basket and free throw by Ryan Leehy with four seconds left in the game, setting up Monday's 6:30 semifinal with Plattsmouth.

The Pius-Plattsmouth game was almost a copy of the first afternoon contest as the Blue Devils pulled away from a 47-all tie with 5:52 remaining on two baskets and a free throw by Chuck Nolte, to lead 54-49 with 3:15 left.

Senior guards Pat Heng, who scored 18 points, and Mark Cooper, who tallied 13, then each connected to bring the Thunderbolts within one point at 53-54 with 2:04 remaining.

But Pius X, which finished the season 9-9, then missed four straight opportunities to take the lead as Plattsmouth turned the ball over three times in the final moment. Nolte iced the game with 15 seconds left hitting both ends of a one-and-one free throw situation.

"Our kids were kind of scared of that famous Pius tradition early in the game," said Plattsmouth coach Arnold "But once we realized this could have been the last game of the season we got back to our running and gunning.

The 'Bolts grabbed a 18-6 lead with 2:09 left in the first quarter as they connected on nine of 12 field goals and Plattsmouth turned the ball over 10 times.

But after switching from a half-court and 2-1-2 zone to a man-to-man defense, the Blue Devils took over control of the boards and tied the game 25-25 on a basket by Steve Haith at 2:10 in the second quarter

Two steals converted to layups by Ric Lindquist, who scored 16 points, helped Plattsmouth grab a 43-39 lead at the end of the third quarter, setting up a final frantic quarter.

"We worried about our offense so much we forgot to look at the basket and take the shot we should have," said Pius X coach Don Kelley. "Then that cold spell at the end when we missed three good shots made the difference between winning and losing.

"The pressure of this game was certainly instrumental to the fact we didn't relax and execute although we hustled well," said Kelley. "When Plattsmouth switched to a man-to-man they bothered us with their quickness and we failed to compensate."

While the 'Bolts got 41 points from guards Cooper, Heng and [illegible] Grosserode Pius X only gained 12 points from their forwards and center

"We didn't take advantage [illegible] underneath the basket because we couldn't get our people playing there to look at the basket," said Kelley.

"We don't play much defense and we don't handle the ball well, but we had good support rebounding and that gave us a lot of second shots," said Arnold, whose team outrebounded the 'Bolts, 40-28.

Plattsmouth dropped a two-point decision to Gretna earlier in the season, but coach Arnold said his team should be able to keep on top. "Our kids tend to get down on themselves and slow down but this is a new season and we got a lot of momentum from beating a good Pius X team."

Four Waverly turnovers in the final minute gave 10th rated Gretna, now 15-5, an opportunity to pull away from a 43-all tie and defeat Waverly, which finished the season 2-14.

I May Be Wrong

Jumping the gun

Football News, the weekly publication out of Detroit, isn't about to be beaten by anybody else In the current issue, they picked the top 30 college football teams for next season.

You aren't going to like this, but the Nebraska Cornhuskers will finish fourth in the Big Eight race next fall and barely squeeze into the nation's top twenty — according to FN.

The publication picks Michigan as its No. 1 team, followed by Notre Dame, Ohio State and Pittsburgh. Oklahoma gets the highest nod for a Big Eight team at No. 5.

While admitting that the Big Eight, overall, will remain the "toughest league in the country," Football News doesn't accord any other top ten spot to the conference.

The remaining teams in that elite circle are given to Southern Cal, Alabama (Nebraska's second foe of the season), Penn State, Arizona State and Houston.

Four in next ten

Following Maryland (No. 11) and Texas Tech comes Colorado at No. 13. The paper puts UCLA and Texas in the 14th and 15th spots. Oklahoma State is No. 16, and thus presumably third in the Big Eight.

After Georgia and Texas A&M comes Nebraska (No. 19), with Iowa State rated 20th.

FN's list is rounded out by Florida, Washington, Tennessee, Arkansas, Mississippi, Kentucky, Stanford, Missouri, LSU and Baylor.

That means six of the Big Eight teams — all but the two Kansas schools — will be among the top 30 in the nation.

Cornhusker coach Tom Osborne probably welcomes being ranked down in the pack. He certainly didn't relish the added pressure which a No. 1 rating caused last fall.

FN suggests that no team can earn No. 1 recognition without an effective running game. Michigan, it is noted, returns its entire front five offensive linemen, including three all-conference starters.

Quarterback the key

While admitting that the quarterback is just one of 11 players on offense, the Football News article points out that every one of the top eight teams in the final 1976 polls had returning experienced signal callers.

Of last year's top twenty, only three teams started off with new quarterbacks. UCLA had lost John Sciarra, but surprised with a vastly improved Jeff Dankworth. Ohio State lost Cornelius Greene, but came up with super soph Rod Gerald, while Colorado found a fine replacement for David Williams in Jeff Knapple.

If this is an accurate barometer, FN says, then Nebraska (Vince Ferragamo), Southern Cal (Vince Evans), Georgia (Ray Goff), UCLA (Dankworth), Oklahoma State (Charlie Weatherbie), Notre Dame (Rick Slager), Florida (Jimmy Fisher) and Missouri (Steve Pisarkiewicz) all have a major problem to solve.

A good schedule is a big key to earning high national honors. This is one of the hazards of being a member of the Big Eight. Michigan needs to win just one game (Ohio State) to be assured of being the Big Ten's King of the Hill. In the Big Eight, it's dog-eat-dog every week.

If the schedule is too weak, a team won't attract national attention. If it's too strong, you'll never make it. Michigan has the proper formula — Texas A&M and Ohio State at home — and not much else.

Oklahoma may be facing too much by playing Ohio State in Columbus and its annual Texas clash in addition to the rugged Big Eight schedule. But, the Sooners play Nebraska, Colorado and Iowa State in Norman next fall. That should be a big plus.

Nebraska's home schedule is advantageous as well. The Huskers play six of their first seven games in Lincoln, with only Kansas State on the road.

Included in the home games are Alabama, Baylor, Iowa State and Colorado — all in FN's top 30 list. If Nebraska jells, the three tough road games — Oklahoma State, Missouri and Oklahoma — at least occur during the final four weeks of the campaign.

Georgia stuns Tennessee

ATHENS, Ga. (AP) — Walter Daniels and Curtis Jackson combined on a 10-point explosion in the final two minutes Saturday night as cellar-dwelling Georgia overcame 41 points by Bernard King and upset seventh-ranked Tennessee 83-76 in a Southeastern Conference basketball game.

The Bulldogs, cellar-dwellers in the SEC, controlled the game throughout, leading by seven points at the half and stretching that to 70-58 with eight minutes remaining before the Vols staged a big comeback.

Tennessee, falling one-half game behind second-ranked Kentucky in the conference race, cut the margin to 70-68 during a 4½-minute scoreless drought by the Bulldogs which finally ended when Lavon Mercer sank a free throw with 3:37 left.

Daniels then hit two straight layups and fed Jackson for the first of his two layins and Mercer added a dunk as Georgia exploded down the stretch.

K-State slaughters Cyclones

Manhattan, Kan. (AP) — All five starters scored in double figures as Kansas State blasted Iowa State 97-62 Saturday night in a first-round game of the Big Eight postseason tournament.

Leading 46-38 at halftime, the Wildcats, who ran their winning streak to eight in a row, steadily pulled away in the second half. They outscored the Cyclones 32-10 in the first 11 minutes to take a commanding 78-48 lead.

Center Darryl Winston and Guard Mike Evans both scored 17 points to lead the way for the Wildcats, who are now 20-7 on the season and are assured of their third straight 20-victory season.

The rest of the starters—forwards Curtis Redding and Larry Dassie and guard Scott Langton—each had 12 points.

K-State did much of its damage at the free throw line, hitting 37 of 41 attempts for 90 per cent to go along with an even 50 per cent from the field.

COLUMBIA, Mo. (AP) — James Clabon and Danny Van Rheen came off the bench to combine for 37 points Saturday night as Missouri ran past Oklahoma State, 92-74, in the first round of the Big Eight postseason basketball tournament. ment.

The victory advances the Tigers to a Thursday night semifinal game against Oklahoma in Kansas City.

Neither team managed more than a six-point lead in the first half, in which Van Rheen replaced the injured Kim Anderson and contributed seven points and six rebounds. Anderson, Missouri's leading scorer for the season, aggravated a shoulder injury and played only about six minutes.

The Cowboys trailed only 66-64, with eight minutes remaining. Missouri then reeled off 12 straight points as foul problems proved the Oklahoma State downfall. The entire Cowboy front line fouled out, allowing Missouri to hit 35 of 41 free throws compared with only two in four attempts for Oklahoma State.

Tireless Grand Island outguns East, 86-73

By Tom Vint
Staff Sports Writer

Two testing ball games in two nights isn't bothering veteran Grand Island coach Bill Kropp. It's those third and possibly fourth games in five days that concerns him.

The No. 1 rated Islanders clipped Kearney Friday night, 71-68 for the Big 10 Conference playoff title. Saturday night it was a handy 86-73 win over scrappy Lincoln East. Then Monday Grand Island opens A-5 district play at Norfolk against Saturday night's Columbus-South Sioux City winner. A win means another test Tuesday.

"If we're not in shape at the end of the season to play two ball games . . ." Kropp said, letting his sentence trail off with a smile. "It's those next two, Monday and maybe Tuesday in districts which could tell on us."

It was the second successive tough battle for East also on Saturday. Friday night the Spartans slipped by Hastings, 67-65, on a basket in the final two seconds.

East and Grand Island didn't appear to be suffering much when Saturday's tilt got underway, however. The running-gunning teams were matched pretty evenly for over seven minutes before GI took a narrow 25-20 first quarter lead.

The 17-1 Islanders shot a blazing 73% from the field in that quarter, compared to 52% by East. And it was Paul Trieschman doing 13 points worth of damage.

East made some changes in the second quarter. A box-and-one defense put Mark Carlson on Trieschman and affectively shut the 6-4 forward off with only two points through the next two quarters.

Instead it was all-state returnee Jeff Finn picking up the slack with 10 second quarter points, making 16 for the half to match an equally impressive effort by East's Dick Chancellor.

Chancellor, guard Tom Vergith and 6-5 sophomore center Derek Sailors kept the Spartans from falling off the Grand Island pace through three quarters. The trio eventually totaled 57 of East's game output.

East led several times in the game but finally fell off the torid Islander pace midway through the third period. After Chancellor knotted the score at 53-all, Kevin Bartlett suddenly caught fire with five straight points.

East came back within one but a three-point play by Finn and another three-point effort early in the fourth quarter by Trieschman put Grand Island in the driver's seat for good.

The Spartan cause was all but lost when Carlson fouled out with 4:08 to play and Trieschman opened up again, ending the night with 22 points, second only to Finn's 28 for GI scoring honors.

Chancellor then fouled out with 1:48 to play, going to the bench with 24 points. Vergith ended with 19, Sailors 14 and Bob Mulvaney 12 as East ended its regular season with a 10-8 mark.

"I think maybe we got a little tired there at the end," coach Paul Forch said of East. "We were hoping to run a little more in the second half to try to wear them down. But they have some very well conditioned athletes. They're an excellent ball club."

East also enters district play next week with a Tuesday meeting at 8 p.m. with Lincoln Northeast in Pershing auditorium. Grand Island's game at Norfolk is slated for 6:15 p.m.

Kentucky bombards Alabama

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — James Lee ignited a Kentucky outburst early in the second half that sent the No. 2 ranked Wildcats to an 85-70 Southeastern Conference victory over Alabama Saturday in a regionally televised game.

The points spree sent Kentucky in front by 12 points with 14:35 left in the game, and although eight-ranked Alabama cut the margin to seven at one point the Wildcats were never seriously threatened.

Larry Johnson led Kentucky with 16 points while Lee added 14 and Rick Robey, Mike Phillips and Jay Shidler had 13 each.

Reginald King led Alabama with 21 points while T. R. Dunn had 18 and Rickey Brown had an even dozen.

Each team led by as many as five points in the first half with Kentucky moving away at 28-27 with 5:15 left before intermission. The Wildcats were never headed again.

Kentucky led 38-35 at halftime, but three minutes into the second period Lee was awarded a basket on goaltending and the Wildcats went to war.

Michigan rallies

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Third-rated Michigan needed last-minute heroics from John Robinson, Phil Hubbard and Rickey Green Saturday to avert an upset and defeat Big Ten rival Michigan State, 69-65, in overtime.

Robinson and Hubbard hit the first two buckets of the overtime period, taking superb passes from Green. Hubbard immediately came back with a steal and Green followed his missed layup to give Michigan a six-point edge.

Robinson added the final touch by hitting Steve Grote all alone under the basket for another easy layup and the Spartans could do little but foul afterward in a desperate attempt to catch up.

The Spartans controlled the ball through much of the first half, looking only for the easy shot, and managed to leave the floor trailing 32-25 at the halftime.

In the second half, Michigan State caught up behind the hot shooting of Greg Kelser and Bob Chapman. The two got the Spartans a 37-35 lead just five minutes into the half. But Michigan forged ahead once again, pulling into a 57-57 tie with 2:39 remaining in the contest.

Newcastle nips Murdock, 40-39

Hooper — No. 4-ranked Newcastle took a 19-9 halftime lead then had to hang on in the second half, downing Murdock, 40-39, in the girls D-2 regional basketball game at Logan View High School Saturday afternoon.

Murdock was never able to gain the lead in the game. The closest it could come was the final score. Murdock's Barb Rikli hit a two-pointer late in the game to make the count, 40-39, but Murdock never got another chance as Newcastle held onto the ball for the remainder of the game.

Rikli led all scorers with 21 tallies. High for Newcastle was Valerie Zerbe with 17 tallies.

Northwest's Brown sparkles

By Chuck Sinclair
Staff Sports Writer

Omaha — Omaha Northwest gymnast Beth Brown admits she's the type of competitor who can make a coach wonder about his or her chosen profession.

High-strung, emotional, sentimental and unpredictable. Take your choice, she's all of the above. But above that she's a champion.

After capturing the all-around title in Friday action to lead the Huskies to their third straight state championship, Brown returned Saturday and captured two individual gold medals as state competition closed at Northwest and Brown ended a successful prep career.

Also the all-around champion a year ago, Brown added gold medals in the floor exercise and uneven bars while Omaha South sophomore Carol Chmelka won the vault and Omaha Burke senior Lynn Talmadge the beam for the second straight year.

"I drive myself crazy," Brown admitted, "So I know what it must do to coach (Roy) Katskee. It used to be worse, I used to get so upset before competition I'd get sick."

Now, she tries to confine her emotional outbursts to after an event.

But you never know what kind of a reaction is waiting.

After Friday's preliminaries on the bars, a perfectly good 8.45 performance that led all qualifiers, Brown broke down in tears.

"It was fine," she said of the performance. "I was just glad to have that all over with. I got hurt on that event last year."

Her injury a year ago kept her out of the individual finals, something she and coach Katskee disagreed on at the time.

"We've gone round and round over quite a few things the past few years, Katskee said. "But she's such a fierce competitor. I've never coached an athlete, boy or girl, with more desire to excel.

"She's always striving to be perfect.

"But she knows what she puts the coaches through too," Katskee added. "She's often said that she could never coach gymnastics because of it."

Brown has a simple reason for being so emotionally tied up in gymnastics. "It's a way of life," she said. "Any time you spend so much of your life working on one thing, it becomes that way.

"I've been very lucky to have two very wonderful coaches to work with since I started with the Gems (an Omaha club)," she said. "Rich and Linda Beran have been fantastic. They've done more for me than I could ever hope for."

Now, Brown has another emotional path to cross, deciding where to go to college to continue her gymnastic's training. For several of the finalists, plenty of prep activity remains, especially for the promising group of sophomores led by Chmelka and Lincoln High's Stacey Porter, the second and fourth place finishers in Friday's all-around competition.

Porter, along with Lincoln Northeast's Denise Wheatly and Patty DeFreece were the only Capital City gymnasts to bring home individual medals to go with Lincoln High's second place team trophy.

Wheatly's fourth place finish on the uneven bars was the highest placing by a Lincoln gymnast as Porter finished fifth on the bars and DeFreece fifth in floor exercise.

Beal sparks Oklahoma

REGIONAL

Norman — Oklahoma, led by freshman Al Beal's 20 points, rode to a 68-56 victory over Colorado here Saturday afternoon in first-round action of the the Big Eight playoff tournament.

Oklahoma now advances to the finals at Kansas City to meet Kansas, a 61-58 victor over Nebraska.

Beal, getting inside for stuff shots repeatedly, hit seven of 12 from the field and had five of seven free throws. He also blocked two shots and stole the ball once.

Colorado was fairly successful holding down sophomore John McCullough, the Sooners' leading scorer. The 6-foot-4 forward managed to get 17 points, but had to pick up seven of them from free throws.

Joining McCullough and Beal in double figures for the Sooners was Cary Carrabine, who also had 17. Carrabine's long-range shooting in the first half managed to force Colorado out of its tight defense and allowed the Sooners to take a 36-27 margin at halftime.

Oklahoma shot a sizzling 62 per cent from the field in the first half, but cooled considerably in the second half to 26 per cent, finishing the game with 43 per cent overall. Colorado could not take advantage of the Sooners' cool shooting in the second half, though, and never mounted a serious threat.

Kearney wins playoff test

By Ken Hambleton

State College Writer

Seward — A combination of a 1-3-1 zone defense and an effective delay game helped Kearney State maintain its lead and gain a 93-87 win over Doane at Concordia College Saturday night in an NAIA playoff game.

The win boosted Kearney's record to 20-9 and gave the Antelopes an NAIA District II playoff berth opposite Hastings, in a best of three which begins Monday at Kearney.

The Antelopes overcame a six-point deficit late in the first half after switching from a man-to-man to a pressing zone defense when junior forward Tom Ritzdorf hit a basket at 2:57 to tie the game at 36-all.

Kearney outscored the Tigers 6-2 in the final minute of the first half to boast a 42-38 halftime edge.

Three baskets by junior 6-9 center Tim Mohanna and five points by Dave Hahn put the Antelopes ahead 55-42 with 16:47 left in the game as the Tigers had trouble getting started.

Doane's Tony Strong scored 10 points in the next two and a half minutes, and combined with two baskets each by Randy Wenz and Fernando Chevannes, the Tigers closed the score on 71-67 at 9:34.

Still playing catch-up ball, the Tigers picked up six fouls in the next seven minutes and Chevannes and guard Frank Hogan fouled out while Kearney counted on 14 of 17 free throws in the final ten minutes of the game to gain the win.

Doane closed the score to 85-81 with 2:20 left on a basket by Robert Eubanks, but the Antelopes broke Doane's press three times in a row on full-court passes that were converted into easy baskets, and Kearney coasted to the win.

Senior forward Loren Killion, who led the Antelopes with 22 points, boosted his career total to 2,009, and was joined in double figures by teammates Ritzdorf, with 19, Mohanna 12, and Hahn with 11.

"We've been depending on that balanced scoring in our last couple of games and the kids that didn't score so many helped us out as much," said Kearney coach Jerry Hueser. "Ritzdorf has really come through for us, especially against UNO and tonight against Doane, and our pressing team is getting better every game."

Kearney, which beat UNO by two points Thursday night to force the playoff game, hadn't used a 1-3-1 zone much this year, according to Hueser. "We experimented with our defenses tonight and once we found we could control the tempo with one zone, we stayed with it," he said.

Strong paced Doane's scoring with 23 points, scoring 15 in the second half, while teammates Wenz and Tom Westover tallied 18 and 17 points respectively for the 19-8 Tigers.

"It was disappointing to see our lack of good judgment at times and our panic with plenty of time on the block," said Doane coach Bob Erickson. "When we played our game we had a five-point lead. But when we played into their hands, we got into a lot of trouble."

Doane hit 39 of 79 field goal attempts, compared to Kearney's 38 of 70, but the Antelopes connected on 17 of 25 free throws, compared to Doane's nine of 14.

Lincoln qualifies 3 teams

Three Lincoln teams have qualified for the girls state tournament — No. 1-ranked East and No. 2-rated Lincoln High in Class A and unranked Pius X in class B.

Pius X will apparently open state tournament play against Wisner-Pilger on Thursday and be bracketed with York and Omaha Mercy.

Top-seeded Lincoln East meets Grand Island in the first round while Lincoln High, with the fourth-best record and in the same brackets as East, will be pitted against Kearney, 12-5.

If the two Lincoln schools win, they will meet in Friday's semifinals.

The girls tourney will get under way Thursday and finish on Saturday.

Teams in each class are seeded one through eight according to win-loss percentage. The top seed plays the eight seed, two against seven, three against six and four against five.

Teams seeded one, four, five and eight will be in one bracket and the other four in the other bracket.

Actual tourney pairings and times will be drawn by the Nebraska School Activities Association today.

Additionally, boys district and regional play continues Monday through Wednesday. Although regional matchups were set Saturday night, sites and times will be determined on Sunday. All boys district and regional play will be completed before the girls state tourney opens Thursday.

Moore's 'sons' spark Fairbury victory

By Dave Sittler

Staff Sports Writer

Chuck Moore says he loves each and every player on his team like a son. Considering the way they played Saturday, he should.

Moore, the veteran Fairbury High School coach, saw his club rip Auburn, 80-51, in first round action of the B-1 district tournament at Nebraska Wesleyan.

In other opening round games, Nebraska City blasted Falls City 80-58, Crete routed Superior 77-55 and Norris topped Syracuse 61-52.

Fairbury, the Sunday Journal and Star's No. 6-ranked team, opened the tourney at Wesleyan's Ira J. Taylor Gym with a brillant display of balanced scoring.

Improving the overall season mark to 17-3, the Jeff's fired a sizzling 63 per cent from the field including an uncanny 11 of 13, 84 per cent effort in the third period.

With four players scoring in double figures and 10 Jeffs getting into the scoring act, Fairbury was led by Moore's son, 6-0 senior guard Rich Moore.

After not taking a shot the first quarter as Auburn only trailed the heavily favored Jeffs 18-14, the young Moore suddenly went on a rampage. In the next three periods, Moore shot 10 times. He missed his first and last attempts but was perfect in between with eight field goals from the 20-25 foot area.

"Sure I'm proud of him," coach Moore said of his son. "But these kids are all my sons. I'm proud of them all and I love them all."

Moore, who coached Fairbury to the state championship in 1972, said his current club is a joy to coach.

"I never get bored with this team," Moore said. "They love to play. They only took one night off from practice all year."

A 96-69 winner over Auburn during the regular season, Moore said he admired the way the Bulldogs took the battle to Fairbury in the early going.

"They (Auburn) came out scrapping," Moore said. "That's what athletics is all about. I even applauded some of Doug Jones' (Auburn center) and Mark Lessor's (Auburn forward) shots. They are fine players."

Lessor, a 6-1 senior, led all scorers with 22 points while Jones added 16 to match 16 by Fairbury's Moore and Jim Rice. The other Jeffs in double figures included 6-6 center Mark Falloon's 12 tallies and 10 markers by guard Tom Oswald.

"Balance all the way," Moore said. "That's been our key all year. We have five kids averaging in double figures and the sixth man is averaging eight points a game."

Preferring to talk about his club as one entire unit instead of the father-son aspect of the Jeffs, Moore did relent a bit to discuss the situation of coaching his son.

"He (Rick) has had a lot of pressure," Moore said, "and he has responded well after a slow start.

"And it's tough on him at home. He has to be around me all the time and you know how coaches can get grumpy this time of the year."

If the Jeffs continue to shoot at the burning pace they displayed Saturday, Chuck Moore should be smiling for a long time.

Crete outscored Superior in every quarter in mounting the commanding lead. The Cardinals led at the quarter breaks 20-17, 37-29 and 52-43.

Jeff Roke pumped in 20 points and Lloyd Heusinkvelt and Darold Kassebaum added 14 points apiece for the Cardinals. Phil Stiles poured in 23 points and Don Kotenik added 10 for Superior.

Norris scored seven straight points to break a 26-26 third quarter tie and pulled away to a 19 point lead in the fourth period before stalling in the last 2:30 to preserve the win.

Norris led 10-8 at the end of the first quarter, but Syracuse scored eight straight points late in the second quarter to take a 22-20 lead at the half. Norris led 38-30 at the end of the third period.

David Luders scored 19 points, Steve Cooper had 17 and Ross Vendergrind had 12 to lead Norris. Randy Reuter led Syracuse with 14 points.

Ruskin ousts defending titlist

Superior — It's literally out of the frying pan and into the fire for tiny Ruskin, a 64-48 winner Saturday night over defending state Class D champion Nelson in the D-7 boys tournament finals

The victory pits undefeated Ruskin against last year s Class D runner up Hildreth for a state tournament berth Hildreth 20-1 and the Journal Star s top rated team, knicked off Wilcox Friday night in district tournament play at Minden to earn a spot in the regional playoff opposite Ruskin

Ruskin battled uphill after an 18-point first half to take command of the game in the third quarter Ruskin coach Glen Revelle told his team at halftime to play ball and get moving

He probably had a little more to say than that with the stakes so high in the eyes of the Ruskin community

The victory over Nelson culminated a three-year battle to beat Nelson in the district tournament finals Two years ago Nelson won by eight and then took a one-point victory in overtime last year enroute to the state title

Although the schools are less than 15 miles apart, they do not schedule each other during the regular season Ruskin, with 47 students in grades 9-12, is less than half the size of neighboring Nelson

Nelson out-rebounded Ruskin 38 28 but 23 of the Tigers rebounds came in the first half "They came back good Revelle said of his Ruskin charges "(Tim) Meyer scored 15 points in the second half and (Tom) Hansen had 11"

Meyer s game high 20 points came on eight free throws and six field goals with the 5 7 senior guard mixing his shooting from the top of the key with driving lay ins

Senior Mark Petersen would earn Revelle s defensive player of the year award for the job he did on Nelson s 6 5 center Tom Schwarz Petersen blocked six of Schwarz s field goal attempts in the free throw lane to help stifle the Nelson attack

According to Revelle the Ruskin game plan was to shut down Nelson s high scoring trio of Schwarz Scott Farver and Nick Biltoft Farver had nine points for the evening and Biltoft closed out his high school career with 6

Schwarz was Nelson s leading scorer with 18 but Ruskin held him to two field goals and four free throws in the final two periods

Ruskin also sparkled at the free throw line hitting 18 of 19 attempts

At 21 0 Ruskin enters this week s regional playoff as one of only two undefeated teams in the state regardless of class The other is Dalton winner of Class D district 15 at Sidney

University of Nebraska-Lincoln women's swimming coach Ray Huppert wasn't satisfied Saturday with the Cornhuskers' second place finish in the Region 6 AIAW swimming and diving championships.

"The girls swam real well," Huppert said, "but we came up short when the points were added up."

According to Huppert, "It's a disappointing way to end the season."

Kansas won the meet which was held at the University's Sports Center.

Bluejays bested, 108-105

DENTON, Tex. (AP) — Lastminute corner shots by Waymond Lister and Fred Mitchell, plus a free throw by Mel Davis, gave North Texas a 108-105 double overtime basketball victory over Creighton Saturday night.

After a shot at the buzzer ending the first overtime by Creighton's Rick Apke was ruled too late, the Eagles were finally able to put away the Bluejays, who had beaten North Texas 101-83 at Omaha earlier this month.

North Texas and Creighton are believed to still be in the running for a District V independent spot in the NCAA playoffs. North Texas is now 21-5 and Creighton 21-4.

Apke hit 38 points for Creighton while Mitchell with 26 and Davis with 23 fueled North Texas.

Lincoln in Metro?

Bill Miller says he doesn't want to sound like a crybaby. "I'm just a very disgusted individual," the Lincoln Southeast athletic director says.

The source of Miller's frustration is Southeast's 1977 football schedule . . . or rather, the lack of it.

"We're the defending state champions and we don't have a game the first week of the season," he says. "I think that's kind of degrading and I think it's time we start to look someplace else to solve our scheduling problems."

That someplace is the Metro Conference, which will expand to 20 teams next school year with the addition of Papillion, Millard, Ralston and Bellevue West.

"I'm hot to trot," Miller says. "I'm ready to join the Metro. Of course, I'm speaking only for myself."

With the Eastern I-80 Conference dissolving, Lincoln's four Class A schools next year will belong to an expanded Trans-Nebraska Conference, joining Fremont, Grand Island, North Platte, Norfolk, Columbus, Hastings, Kearney, Beatrice, Scottsbluff and Alliance.

Full schedule wanted

The only problem with that, Miller says, is that the Big 10 Conference will continue to operate "exactly like it wants to. All I want is a full schedule. i don't think that's asking too much. The Metro would guarantee us a full schedule."

Right now, Lincoln's athletic directors are split over whether to recommend to Supt. John Prasch that Lincoln schools join the Metro.

Miller strongly favors it. Lincoln High athletic director Jim Sommers is equally strong against it. Northeast's Max Hester and East's Phil Sprague would prefer that the expanded Trans-Nebraska work, but neither is turned off by the idea of joining the Metro.

"My allegiance is to the Trans-Nebraska," Sprague says. "But if it doesn't work out, I say it's time to look. Where do you look? Where else would you look? You look 50 miles to the east.

"It everyone hangs together, I think the Trans-Nebraska can work," adds Sprague. "Frankly, I think it can work. But I don't think people realize how serious the Lincoln schools are to make it work. If everybody has to apply pressure — and I don't just mean the four Lincoln schools — then everybody should apply pressure."

Game with Bellevue

Hester says Northeast would have been in the same shape as Southeast this fall in football, "but we were lucky to pick up a game with Bellevue. I can certainly understand Bill's feelings.

"These schedules can drive you right up a wall," adds Hester. "I'm sitting here right now with only 13 basketball games for next year. There are no easy answers. We need the outstate teams, but they need us, too. If we joined the Metro, it would really split this state. We're happy with the competition now, but if we're not able to fulfill a schedule, I think you have to go someplace."

Sommers believes if Lincoln attempts to join the Metro, Capital City schools would be guilty of the isolationism for which they have condemned Omaha schools.

"I favor competition throughout the state. If the only way for more games is to get involved with more schools, then that is what I'd like to have. But I wouldn't want to get in a situation where the competition would be strictly between Lincoln and Omaha schools," he says.

There are only three schools in the expanded Trans-Nebraska wanting to compete against all four Lincoln schools in all sports — Fremont, Grand Island and North Platte.

Kearney cast as villain

Others have agreed to play two Lincoln teams in football. Kearney has been cast as the villain by Lincoln schools in the restructured Trans-Nebraska.

The Bearcats, who play all four Lincoln teams in basketball, would not schedule any Lincoln team in football next fall.

Kearney, however, has kept Class B Holdrege, a nonconference opponent, on the schedule. Principal Harold McClure realizes his school is shouldering the brunt of Lincoln's wrath and he will explain Kearney's side of the story in Prep Panorama next Sunday.

Omaha — Niece Jochims fired in 35 points to lead UNO to a 74-74 win over Nebraska here Saturday to qualify the Mavericks for the Women's AIAW Region VI tourney March 10-12 in Decorah, Iowa.

The playoff between the two schools to determine the state representative in the regional tourney had been tied at one game each.

Jochims, a 5-11 sophomore, connected on 11 of 17 field goal attempts, and was 13 of 17 from the charity stripe.

The game was tight throughout the first half, with UNO holding a slim 27-25 edge at intermission.

But the Mavericks outscored Nebraska 14-4 in the first seven minutes of the second half to lead 41-29, and then steadily pulled away the remainder of the contest.

The Lady Huskers, hurt by the loss of leading scorer Jan Crouch and starter Deb Lee due to injuries, managed to shoot only 31% from the field for the afternoon. Sherry Brink paced Nebraska with 17 points and Linda Janssen added 15.

Horse racing starts Thursday

By Mark Gordon
Staff Sports Writer

When Fonner Park in grand Island opens its horse racing season on Thursday veteran fans may have trouble recognizing the place

It's our biggest building project ever," explained Fonner assistant general manager Hugh Miner of the $1 million expansion "It will really make it more convenient for our fans "

There is a 60-foot addition to the clubhouse, mezzanine and concourse levels on the north end of the grandstand Perhaps the most noticeable change is a new third level addition at the top and back of the grandstand

Overall, there will be 1,500 more seats to accommodate fans during the 40-day meeting through April 30

The addition to the back of the grandstand is 280 foot long and 80 feet wide, Miner said It will seat 450 people, have 64 mutuel windows and concessions and rest rooms will be located at each end

Our skyline level will relieve the congestion that we've always had on the mezzanine level,' Miner said Now, it's just as close for half the granstand as it was to the mezzanine Before, all grand stand people had to walk down to the mezzanine Now it will be just as close for half the grandstand to walk to the skyline as to the mezzanine "

The clubhouse addition consists of 112 tables with 448 more seats, bringing total capacity to 1,044 Thirteen more mutuel windows have been installed in the clubhouse

"Everything's been enlarged in the clubhouse," Miner explained "We've already sold all the clubhouse seats that we wanted on a season basis We have a few left on a daily basis The interest in just great in our clubhouse

'We've really had the weather for our building project," he said "We started late and if we hadn't had such nice weather, we might have been in trouble Everything's done and we're ready to go "

For the additional convenience of patrons, a new color closed circuit television system is being installed by Turb Photo service of Lafayette, La

"They're putting in a brand new system with new TV cameras and nonitors," Miner said "It's a new improved system and they will also use it for the State Fairgrounds' races this summer in Lincoln "

The main attraction as usual, will be the thoroughbreds About 1,000 are stabled on the Fonner grounds

Nine races will be scheduled each day with $3 exacta wagering on the fourth, sixth and ninth races A $2 daily double will be offered on the first and second chases

Thursday's opening day feature is the $5,000 Inaugural Handicap a 4-furlong event for 3 year-old fillies

Saturday's feature will be the $5 000 Jake Grasmick Handicap a 4-furlong sprint for 3-year-olds and older runners

Horsemen will compete for total purses of $930 000 and estimated stakes and features worth $150 000

The minimum purse will be a record $2 000 A year ago it was $1,800

The meet's featured attraction will be the $15 000-added Nebraska Derby for 3-year-olds The mile event is set for April 23

The top race for older campaigners will be the $15,000-added Gus Fonner Handicap, for 3 year-olds and up The closing day chase on April 30 is at one mile and 70 yards

It's All Outdoors

By Tom Vint

How high's the water?

Johnny Cash's song "How High's The Water, Momma?" is being sung around the country a good deal these days but the water "ain't" rising.

Water was an area of concern for some of the resort owners through the west and midwest during the Omaha Boat, Sports and Travel Show during the past week. The show, sponsored by the Omaha Fish and Wildlife Club, ends today in Civic Auditorium.

Steve Brehm, former Lincolnite and now Arbor Lights Lodge owner at Bull Shoals in Arkansas, said the water level in their big hydro-electric generating reservoirs is an area of concern.

Bull Shoals and its sister lake, Norfolk, are well down, Brehm said. Norfolk's people are even considering disaster relief funds. Power generation must go on and when the rains and runoff don't occur, it's low water time for these massive bodies of water.

The Arkansas lakes also had a rarity this past winter. The lakes froze over. Five or six inches of ice covered the lakes, according to Brehm. How was the ice fishing? "Nobody probably even thought of that," Brehm said, smiling. "They just wanted to stay warm."

Outstate Nebraska

Monte Samuelson of Samuelson's Cabins at Lake McConaughy said Big Mac is still down considerably after last year's water woes.

The lake has started to shake off its ice cover, however, and catfishing is already picking up in the west end. Trout are already doing well in Lake Ogallala below the McConaughy dam.

Also of note, the Lake McConaughy pamphlet, listing the facilities, locations, bait dealers, guides and anything else needed about the recreation of Lake McConaughy, is now available. If interested, write the Ogallala Chamber of Commerce.

Minnesota bounces back

Dave Gaitley of the Minnesota tourism division reports that state is bouncing back from a bad drouth last year. Dry weather forced closure of some of that state's hunting and fishing to cut down on forest fire hazards.

Low water shouldn't be a problem, according to Gaitley. Snowfall and anything close to normal spring rains will get low water lakes back on their feet, he said.

"We're looking forward to another good year," Gailey said, pointing out the possibilities of very dry states to the south of Minnesota, to include Nebraska, might be sending more fishermen north just to find adequate fishing water this season.

Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri, Arkansas, Kansas and others are all concerned about the water shortages for their upcoming water recreation seasons. Another dry season could seriously affect many of those state's resort industry people, some for the second year in a row.

North country dream trips lure Nebraskans

By Tom Vint
Outdoor Editor

Omaha — Even the resort owners call it a "trip of a lifetime," that flight into the reaches of the frozen tundra near the Arctic Circle.

That's the place where six weeks out of the year a fisherman has a chance to catch a fish as big as he is, where fewer people walk the shorelines each summer than live in many of even the smallest towns in Nebraska. It is where world record catches are an any day possibility, where many a lifetime of dreams about big fish fishing become reality.

The lure of the great north has come to Nebraska in the form of numerous exhibitors from Canadian provinces at the 30th annual Omaha Boat, Sports and Travel Show, which is in its last day today at Civic Auditorium.

Joe Kanik, whose Arctic Circle Lodge is a mere 20 miles away from the nearest town (population 150 in good years), says his Great Bear Lake Lodge is getting more people from the Midwest each year. Rod Holton of Canada North Lodge and Art Pascoe of Plummer's Lodge agree.

"It's something different for most of them and they'd like to see what it's like," Holton said of the far north trips.

"You could say they want to visit and fish virgin area," said Pascoe. "Area that has not been spoiled by man. Water that is more pure than your city drinking water, and a try for the trophies they want to have mounted on the wall."

"It's a trip of a lifetime," said Kanik, whose lodge owns current world record claims for lake trout, arctic char and grayling. "We've had Nebraska people and Iowa people come up with excellent response from these sport shows."

Holton's Canada North Lodge out of Ear Falls in Ontario, Canada, isn't as far north as the other two and also offers hunting, which is not offered by the Kanik or Pascoe lodges.

And Holton's offerings of "convenient locations, good fishing, and a good reputation" are available at less than half the fees needed to try one of the Great Bear trips.

All three resort operations are fly-in trips, with the Great Bear and Slave Lake operations of Arctic Circle and Plummers running in excess of $1,200. At those rates these aren't everyday trips, but they aren't advertised that way either.

"We get a lot of hard-working people who've saved their money," Kanik said. "We've had policemen, farmers, insurance salesmen. It's not all doctors and lawyers."

"We're getting more young people all the time," said Pascoe. "I think they're putting two and two together and figuring out they can save themselves the cost of six or seven fishing trips around their country and be able to spend an entire week up here with us."

"Up here" is the place where the fishing season lasts six, maybe eight weeks, from July through August. Some 60 people a week can make the Plummers trip, with another 34 to Arctic Circle. Everything is flown in and modern facilities await the guests.

Great Bear is in a class by itself for fishing. It is well up in the top 10 largest freshwater lakes in the world. It has some 12,000 square miles of crystal clear water. Some of it reaches depths of 1,000 to 1,200 feet. Ice fishing is unheard of when anglers would have to go through 12 feet of ice just to reach water. And during the fishing season, even the lake trout, known as a deep water fish, seldom get below the 20-foot mark in the cold waters.

But the trophy fish . . . Kanik and Pascoe just smile. "Unmatched anywhere," Kanik said. "Fishing trip of a lifetime," said Pascoe.

"Like the 65-year-old man who came up last year," said Pascoe. "He caught a 62-pounder and was thrilled as he could be. That fish right there made his lifetime of fishing. That's why we're up there."

DU sets record

Chicago — Ducks Unlimited, the international waterfowl conservation organization, announced that it has dramatically enhanced the environmental quality of 132,515 new wetland acres in Canada during 1976. According to DU officials, 3 million cubic yards of earth were moved (enough to fill 180 football fields ten feet deep) to provide more living space for North American waterfowl and some 250 other wildlife species.

The organization worked on 107 habitat projects throughout the Canadian provinces, totalling 2,780 new duck-producing shoreline miles. Major repairs or alterations were carried out on eleven sites during the year, while 258 projects received minor repairs and maintenance. In addition to the new acreage, 224,735 more acres received restoration work.

Can't duck this one; mallards cause problem

Chicago — The mallard duck could become the urban nuisance that pigeons are, conservation officials are warning.

"If ducks perched on trees, you'd be astounded by their number," said Ray Pauley, curator of birds at Brookfield Zoo. Green-headed mallards are taking to area ponds and the free food they find there, just as wild rock doves adapted to the handouts of city life and became the ubiquitous pigeon, the Illinois Conservation Department said.

Pauley heads the zoo's Operation Vamoose, which takes captured mallard freeloaders three hours away to the rock River in hopes of sending them on a natural migration. The zoo had 2,000 mallards on its small ornamental pond two years ago. Now it has 10,000, he said.

Too many mallards are not only a health hazard, he said, but also bother human beings, who worry about the birds' habit of ganging up on a female mallard.

"It may be essential to propagating in the wild," he said, "but people don't like it.

"Every spring people yell at us to stop them, which is pretty near impossible."

A Des Plaines River area housewife agreed. She said that every spring she arms herself with a broom and runs out of her house to protect the female birds.

Conservation officials say "stop feeding the ducks," and zoo officials, who lose more than a ton of feed weekly to unwanted mallards, agree.

A Thornton Twp. man suffers in another way from the duck onslaught. Robert Rumbold has 18 ornamental swans, a few geese and up to 300 trespassing mallards. When other ponds freeze over, his stays open, he said. That's when he gets the major mallard influx.

"One duck eats as much as two swans (do)," he said, "and as much as seven peacocks," which he also raises. Rumbold said he can't afford to feed the ducks.

But Lincoln Park Zoo's assistant director was delighted to say that his zoo doesn't have a mallard problem. "The open water of the lakefront attracts them away from the zoo," he said.

"As a matter of fact, we sort of like our mallards over here. We don't mind if they eat a little extra."

Lincoln

The Lincoln City Council rejected businessman LaVern Gillett's proposal to turn Bethesda Hospital into a care center for the elderly. Gillett said he is not giving up. Dr. Richard Nesmith, senior minister at Trinity United Methodist Church has resigned to become dean of Boston University's School of Theology. The proposed Northeast Radial, once a tempestuous issue especially for the Clinton neighborhood, seems to be receiving much less opposition now. City Council has been discussing alternatives to the rejected plan of a massive freeway-like connector to downtown. Possibilities include variations of the radial. [illegible] W. Faulkner has been named president and chief administrative officer of Woodmen Accident and Life Co. of Lincoln.

Nebraska

The Nebraska Public Power District has given the Omaha Public Power District (OPPD) 60 days to resume construction of the Ft. Calhoun No. 2 nuclear power plant or be liable for violating their joint construction contract. The president of the OPPD board of directors said it is unlikely that the utility will reconsider its decision to nix the plant. Workers are striking the Iowa Beef Processors plant in Dakota City as part of a national strike against the firm. Don [illegible], deputy general manager of the Nebraska Public Power District has charged that the Nebraska Municipal Power Pool has failed to provide cheap electricity to its members.

"My grandpa caught fishes, big and small,
enough to fill my pail,
But the biggest fish he ever got were the ones he caught by the tale!"

Dugdale, Pettit top keglers

The women dominated action in local bowling during the past week.

Leading the way was Jan Dugdale, who earned a century patch by firing a big 265 game at Two Eyed Jacks in Emerald. It is the fifth best game shot by a woman so far in fall leagues.

Dugdale also had a 607 series, one of seven women's 600 during the week.

Top women's series was shot by Yvonne Pettit, who had 624 at Plaza. It was the second straight week Pettit has had the women's high series.

Other 600s were shot by Shirley Deterding (615, Hollywood); Jean Merriman (609, Hollywood); Jan Jackson (605, Plaza); Sue Davis (602, Parkway) and Marie Walton (601, Bowl-Mor).

Davis' 600 was her first. Walton had a 258 game en route to her 600 while Jackson had a 245 game while shooting six. Patt David narrowly missed 600, shooting 599 at Plaza, while a couple of other good women's games saw Carol Renemans hit 242 and Sharon Goodban 241, both at Plaza.

Among the men, Darrell Gross led the way, hitting the week's only 700 series, a 701 at Parkway. Dave Novak and Gayle Jensen had 699s, Novak bowling at Two Eyed Jacks and Jensen at Parkway.

Top men's game was shot by Briarpark manager Mike Vogt, who hit 278 at his own house.

If you think big splits are tough to pick up, talk to Lettie Evans, who picked up the 8-10 at Parkway or John Chicoine, who picked up the 5-7-10 at Briarpark or Ken Bonge, who picked up double pinochle, the 4-6-7-10, at Plaza. It was the second time Evans has picked up the 8-10, she accomplished the feat last summer at Hollywood.

In other notes, Bryan Brown earned a century patch by shooting 253 on a 145 average at Plaza. Also getting a century patch was Gloria Peterson, who shot 195 on a 94 average, also at Plaza.

Kathy Peterson had an all-spare 176 game at Parkway while Bev Keller had a 159 triplicate at Briarpark and Pat Hornby had a 130 triplicate at Hollywood.

Two bowlers, Mike Spadt (603, Hollywood) and Lyle Gruntorad (625, Plaza) had their first 600s. First 500s were shot by Byrdie Mrkvicka (537, Plaza); Dorma Pinkston (536, Parkway); Nancy Chavira (527, Parkway) and Evelyn Schewe (514, Plaza).

Mrkvicka also had her first 200 game, a 204. Also getting their first 200s were Janet Mandery (224, Bowl-Mor); Nancy Wimmer 213, Plaza); Pat Thalken (213, Briarpark); Peg Egger (209, Parkway); Debbie Gropp (205, Hollywood); Deb Lowe (202, Briarpark); Ginny Honer (200, Plaza) and Shirley Ellsworth (200, Plaza).

Ressler Miller titlist

Milwaukee (UPI) — Eddie Ressler, a five-year veteran of the pro bowling tour, started in fifth Saturday but climbed to the top of the pack, coming from behind to beat Dave Soutar 224-222 and take the $14,000 first prize in the $100,000 Miller Open Bowling tournament.

Ressler, 22, Allentown, Pa., defeated Jimmy Certain 194-164, Earl Anthony 278-209 and Sam Flanagan 191-149 to earn the right to face the top-seeded Soutar for the title.

It was the third win on the PBA tour for Ressler, who said he gained confidence in the game against Certain and then got even more by firing nine straight strikes at Anthony, the PBA's leading money winner, before leaving the four pin in the 10th frame.

"I guess I couldn't have picked a better time to reach my peak," he said. "Winning that first game gave me confidence. When I got nine in a row in the second match I gathered even more and it seemed to carry through into the last game. I bowled better today than I did all week."

In the title match, Ressler trailed by six pins, 164-158, after seven frames, but he struck in the eighth and ninth frames while Soutar struck in the eighth but opened in ninth.

Soutar got $8,000 for finishing second. Flanagan won $5,000, Anthony $4,000 and Certain $3,500.

Ressler's winnings boosted him to third among the PBA bowlers this year. Anthony, the leader the past three years, has won slightly more than $34,000.

Traveler discovers Shangri-La in Texas resaca

Mile after mile we drove through desert — a strange most peculiar kind of desert

We were only a few miles from the Gulf of Mexico yet the land cried out for water — sweet salt free water The sparse vegetation that had survived was stunted Cattle trying to eke out an existence were sickly and poor

The country reached inside a person and made him feel lonesome forlorn

Then in the distance appeared trees In a few minutes we were in a lovely tropical paradise The change was unbelievably abrupt almost breathtaking We had moved literally from a desert into an oasis

Instead of stunted mesquite and emaciated cattle there were stately royal palms oleander bougainvillea and wisteria Amidst large impressive estates were citrus groves — orange grapefruit and tangerine

The owner of one of these estates took us into her yard She pointed out date palms She picked a bag of oranges They were as large as the grapefruit usually available in Nebraska stores

Then she performed a strange rite She went to the garage and came back with a bag from which she took something similar to commercial rabbit food She began to throw the pellets into a body of water at the back of her home

The water seemed to boil Scores of fish began to surface and jump for the pellets

She tossed several handfuls close to shore and when the fish came in she patted them gently on the head! (We're not asking that you believe this story It is in the precise meaning of the word incredible)

Where is this Shangri-La?

It's a tiny village called Bayview about 50 miles east and north of Brownsville Tex

How did this oasis magically appear in the midst of a desert?

Bayview is a resaca a testament to the inventiveness of man Many years ago sweet water from the Rio Grande River was pumped into an old dry stream bed and the stream sealed at both ends A governmental water district now maintains the level of the water lowering it when hurricanes threaten raising it when evaporation or localized irrigation make this necessary

With the passage of time, the water has leached from the stream into the adjoining land In fact the presence of water has changed the whole environment

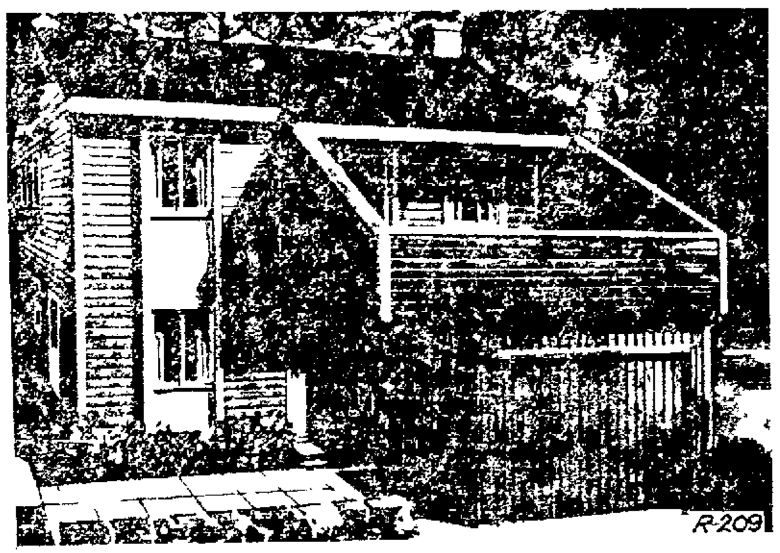
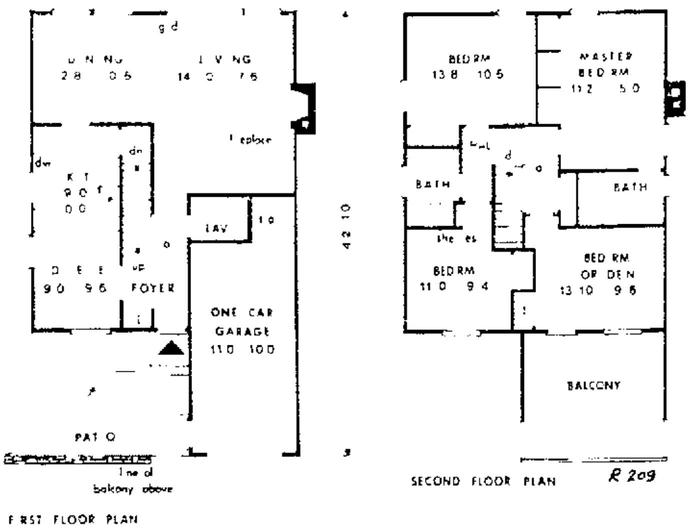
Of course the real secret of a resaca is that it not only waters plants but it also creates a mini environment favorable to man and animal as well as plant

Is there any reason why resacas would not be as productive in Nebraska as in southern Texas?





Bold simplicity is inherent in the exterior, with design features being the balcony and the vertical window units combining the first and second-floor windows with trim and panel Wood siding is both horizontal and vertical, set off by white trim

2-story design for narrow lot

By Andy Lang AP

As the amount of land available for one family housing becomes increasingly scarce the price of property rises accordingly This is especially so near or within city limits where lots shrink to prevent them from being priced out of the market

R 209 has been designed for the narrow lot It has two stories and four bedrooms or if desired three bedrooms and a den Although only 28 2 wide it provides slightly over 1600 sq ft of habitable area a tribute to the ability of architect Samuel Paul to create a floor plan that is compact without sacrificing the features of good living

Because of the narrow lot the front and rear are opened to outdoor living The rear wall which has an abundance of glass and which is the only exposed wall of the living and dining rooms opens to a patio which spans the entire rear wall

At the front outdoor living is in the form of a large second floor balcony off what could be a den or fourth bedroom The balcony over the garage projects about 3½ feet beyond the wall of the garage forming a covered shelter for the entrance door Privacy for the balcony is obtained with high slanting sides which start at the roof and slope down at the same angle as the roof until it meets the normal high front railing It also provides a design feature which enhances the facade

At ground level is a front patio defined by a low stone wall and planting The entry into the house can be a very pleasant walk under the balcony overhand and through the landscaped patio The plan clearly shows how it is possible to have outdoor living and gardens on a narrow plot and yet maintain privacy

Inside the house the central foyer leads to all the rooms There is a view stright through the living room to the rear garden A decorative stair leads to the second floor To the left of the foyer is the dinette which flows into the full kitchen off which is a stairway to a full basement

The dining room ells off the living room Together, they occupy the whole rear of the house The living room features a decorative brick fireplace A downstairs lavatory is conveniently located off the entrance foyer

The attached one-car garage is equipped with storage space in the rear A door leading from the garage to the sheltered entry gives protection from the weather

On the second floor are four bedrooms located around the central stair hall The master suite has one whole wall of closets with its own full bath A convenient hall bath services the other three rooms Other features which add to the livability of the house are the 5 foot linen closet and the built in book shelves in the front bedroom

HINDSIGHT HURTS

If you happen to be an old newspaper collector you should have valuable insight into the wisdom of investing in real estate during inflation As a case in point one home recently sold for $52-000 Five years ago this same home sold for $35 000

True prices have never been higher but it appears unlikely that they will make any substantial drop For example if this $35 000 home increased in value at a rate of only 6 per year in ten years it would be worth $62 680 In twenty years the same house would be selling at $112 250 The 6 % appreciation figure is even conservative for some of the more recent years of higher inflation

In all likelihood today s prices will continue to be tomorrow s bargains It does not appear that the demand for our fixed supply of real estate will slacken Shakespearean advice applies If to buy or not to buy is the question t were well if it were done now

Garden Gossip

New plant varieties not cure-all

- Wound prevention will help remedy frost crack damage on trees
- Don't worry about squirrels foraging on a few twigs this time of year
- Annuals with mature flowers end their life cycle

By Brent Hoadley
County Agent Horticulture

New varieties of vegetables and flowers which you may have ordered or will purchase for your garden should not be considered the cure-all to replace good horticultural practices

A standard recommendation is to buy VFN varieties of tomatoes These are resistant to verticillium fusarium and nemotode soil problems This does not guarantee freedom from early or late blight blossom end rot or insect problems Mulching thorough soil preparation crop rotation and good planning will help you get the most out of the new tomato varieties

Cucumbers are easy to grow in Nebraska Disease resistance heat resistance all-female flowers and increased quality are some of the claims for new cucumber varieties Choosing an all-female flowered cucumber will provide many cucumbers all at once for pickling These will not provide slicing cucumbers over a long season More important than a choice of female flowers would be to choose a pickling cucumber for pickles and a slicing cucumber for slicing

A bush type winter squash, a seedless watermelon an early season cole crop a higher yielding canteloupe or any improved varieties you select will only be as good as your garden planning and cultural practices

AFL-CIO vote view is told

Bal Harbour Fla (AP) Every adult citizen of the United States should be able to vote without first having to register the AFL-CIO said

Sunrise

Follow the Rocky Road It leads to the Wizard of Quilting, through the land of Patchwork, somewhere over the Lone Star

At the end of the road past pinpricks and mismatched pieces you ll find at least a cover for the bed and at most a family treasure

Rocky road patchwork and lone star are just a few of the patterns familiar to quilters Some designs have a history as complicated and long as the time it takes to make a quilt Others are as simple to figure out as their name implies — like the lone star

Quilting spans the generations Through its countless designs colors textures and fabrics it traces the history of its maker

Satins, velvets

A great grandmother in Boston in the 1800s might have included rich satins and velvets in her handiwork The plate printed calicos would indicate some of the material had come from English mills Its elaborate stitches and pattern and double-bed size hint that it might be used as a wedding gift for an elegant bride

That coverlet would be a far cry from its cousin-quilt made at a barn raising on the prairie The country version leaned toward practicality and everyday use It was made of leftover scraps pieced by hand in calicos ginghams and cottons They were quality with durability A quilting bee at a barn raising turned tedious handiwork into a party It was an excuse to travel to a nearby farm socialize and help a neighbor at the same time

Like many women Marie Johnson began quilting with her gradmother When I was a little girl it was my job to help her press the pieces she said Later she learned to piece entire blocks Finishing the quilt came later What began as a hobby turned into a craft for Mrs Johnson She currently teaches the skill at Southeast Community College

Waiting list

Quilting is no longer reserved for church groups and grandmothers Mrs Johnson s classes are always full with a long waiting list And the quilters can be anywhere from 15 to 75 years old

She explains the types of needles kinds of material and a few tricks of the trade she's picked up over the years

For example to remove the blood stains left from a pinprick wet a piece of the dacron batting with your saliva and rub the stain from the quilt cover Be sure the saliva and blood are from the same person otherwise it won t work Sounds crazy but Mrs Johnson swears by it

A more common solution kept on hand at quilting gatherings is a bucket of one part clorox bleach to seven parts water

Mrs Johnson likes to stick to the traditional method of piecing by hand She thinks it s more accurate than using the sewing machine on blocks

Drunkard's path

To get her classes started she gives them instructions on the Drunkard s Path design There are 35 variations of that block including Rocky Road chain quilt the Dove and Robbing Peter to Pay Paul She can keep the class somewhat uniform without letting individuality suffer Later they can try other patterns

The number one rule when it comes to quilting material use high quality goods They don t ravel or fade as readily and are usually easier to work with Although the old time quilts were made from precious leftover scraps most modern materials are bought with the final product in mind Buy enough the first time Second bolts of the fabric may come from different dye lots or have to be back ordered Mrs Johnson recommends calicos cotton or cotton blends

To figure how much material is needed, begin by making one block of the pattern Figure how many blocks will be needed for the finished product and multiply that by the amount of each kind of material A good rule of thumb is about 30 blocks for a finished quilt

Leave one-fourth inch on every block to piece the blocks together The master pattern should be used to make two sandpaper patterns then tucked away for safekeeping The sandpaper stays put on the cloth If you notice it slowly getting smaller while cutting, discard it and make a new one

The blocks can be pieced hundreds of different ways The most common are solid to solid block to block in strips or in a specific pattern

Quilting comes next and is usually done in a group But with a little determination a quilting frame and lots of time an individual can do the work herself Whether alone or with friends the purpose is the same — fastening together layers of fabric

The quilting design is up to the individual The careful symmetry of the stitches can be used to complement the pieced blocks or stand alone in a completely unique design

Mrs Johnson suggests dacron batting for the filler between the pieced blocks and broadcloth back Broadcloth is her choice because of its wide length (45 inches) so there is only one seam up the back of the finished quilt

Needles are short sharp and usually a ' number nine between Any size from a ' 10 between to a seven between works Whatever is best for you Mrs Johnson said

The quilting goes faster if there s rosin around A little on the fingers makes the needle pull through the fabric easier To loosen up the rosin scratch it a few times with the needle point

Thread like the needle takes special treatment "Wax it, Mrs Johnson said 'Drop it in parafin and fry the spools Give a close watch to styrafoam and plastic spools They melt if not removed in time Mrs Johnson advises taking them out when they give a little in the middle

The stitching can t begin until thimbles are in place They re a necessity of the trade Make sure they fit snugly but not tightly She recommends a slightly rounded top to the thimble with a rolled edge on the bottom

If everything s ready quilt in its frame then get to quilting Or if the quilting process seems too tedious try the tying method Threads are drawn through the layers of fabric and knotted

And when the work of art is finished whether you hang it or use it to warm the winter nights let it breathe Mrs Johnson warns not to leave a quilt in a plastic bag for more than three months It needs fresh air

Signed quilts patch together women, past

Like any work of art a quilt deserves a signature The signing could be a detailed account of the dates age and name of the maker or simply a set of initials

For example embroidered in the corner of a young girl s quilt I Lillian V Myers traced cut basted and sewed on after I had traced and perforated patterns and stamped goods to sew to Time to make took 300 hours 1933 On the back she embroidered Feb 22 1934 Ready to start quilting and later Finished July 6 1935 The time it took to finish indicates it was an individual effort without the help of a quilting bee

Another quilt carries a message handwritten on a piece of cloth sewn to a corner Mrs W P Dunlap 5817 Monte Vista St Made by an old colored slave before the Civil War

Mrs Dunlap didn t think it was necessary to [illegible] the town A post-Civil War quilt shows it was made by Ellen Dicus EAST AVE Greenfield Mo These quilts are in the collection of Linda Reuther and Julie [illegible] of San Rafael Calif

Album friendship or commemorative quilts made for a friend or occasion can have dozens of signatures Each block is signed by a different maker then sewn together and quilted

According to tradition the proper place for an inscription is on the center panel or on the [illegible] pattern A signature should include the [illegible] month year of finishing and full [illegible]

Stories by Kathy Moore, photos by Harald Dreimanis

Quilting follows patterns, but can be just as individual as the person Each student tries her own style

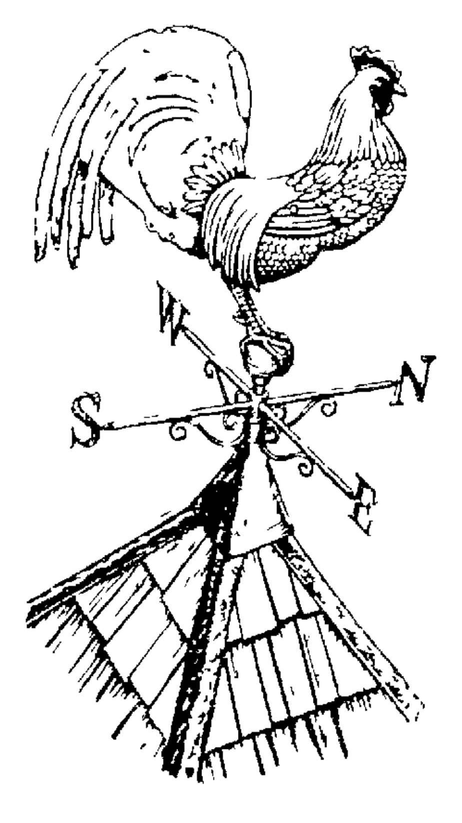
Quilts became subtle vehicle for viewpoints

Quilting bees were often used for more than exchanging gossip or idle chatter

According to history books Susan B Anthony made her first declaration of women s rights at a quilting bee

Talk of politics and war were woven through the conversation along with the threaded needle One pattern the Radical Rose — with a black square at the center expressed the women s concern for the plight of slaves

Another pattern [illegible] Whig s Defeat in bold greens and reds was pieced by a women [illegible]



Weather vanes

a device whose era is turning in the breeze

By Betty Stevens

Weather vanes — originals — are just about as hard to find as original roofs But they do exist mostly on buildings with tile roofs

They are being marketed again in building supply outlets a part of the nostalgia antique craze

But the current product stamped out of aluminum is not in the same league with weather vanes of yesteryear

Weather vanes trace their roots to Europe and were an outgrowth of heraldry banners flown from the turrets of castles Additionally in the 9th Century a papal decree called for a rooster to be mounted on every church as a reminder of Peter s denial of the Christ

Weather vanes in the United States had a highly utilitarian function Before electronic weather predictions, people could tell from cloud formations and other weather data what was going to happen next, especially with a perfect wind indicator

And those wind indicators took the shape of the interests of the households or businesses on whose roofs they were placed The American eagle was a popular model

The J W Fiske weather vane catalog was published in the late 1800s about the time weather vanes reached their zenith

Fiske in his catalog claimed all his vanes were copper and gilded with gold leaf A 34-inch buffalo sold for $65 There were fish deer running horses elephants dragons cows lions and the Angel Gabriel

Early American vanes were one of a kind created by individual craftsmen and with minute detail even though that detail could never be seen when the vanes were in place

Sometimes the artistry of the vane superceded the function

The oldest known weather vane in the U S is dated 1656 and was on the First Reformed Church roof in Albany, N Y An increase in the thefts of weather vanes and the great value of that one resulted in the congregation having it removed from the roof and placed inside the church

The 1919 Montgomery Ward catalog offered weather vanes that were being mass produced A handsome gilt animal — cow horse dog — with a colored ball base for $3 05

It was commercial radio in the 1920s and 1930s that made weather vanes obsolete Radio brought weather forcasts temperature readings and even wind velocity and direction information right inside the house

People had no more reason to check the sky against the direction of the wind and an era died

World of Women

Her life is serene but still a bit shaky

By Linda Ulrich

In Turkey nice girls don't belly dance

So Anoush Stoddart, a nice Turkish girl, never danced in her native land

"Most of the girls who belly dance in Turkey are lost," she said

Anoush Stoddart

Two years ago, Mrs Stoddart, who is now a nice American woman and far from lost, did her first belly dancing in a class at the YWCA

She now instructs a class of 20 women in her home but she never forgets her roots "I can't tell my sister I'm belly dancing," she said

Belly dancing is not just shaking your hips or shaking your body, Mrs Stoddart said, although she is proud she has shaken 3½ inches from her waist since she began dancing

Mrs Stoddart, who has three children, dances for fun and because she enjoys the music — "it speaks to me"

It is her 13th year in America and she says, "no matter how long I've been out of my country, I still can't help liking some of the customs, some of the music home, you miss it You can't get it out of your mind, your heart"

But, I'm very proud to be an American, I honestly am," she said

At her naturalization ceremony Oct 2, 1969, a friend told her her only words were "here I come America"

Her memories of being a Christian in a Moslem country include the remembrance that "even in a free country, there s not a free feeling inside you"

She was the first Christian to work for the government and learned to type, file and keep books

It was while working for the government that she met her husband Henry, an American civilian doing construction for American soldiers

They have three children, Helen, 17, and Carol, 14, who were born in Turkey, and Tom, 8

Her real first name is "a truly Armenian name," Havganus She never liked it in Turkey but she wanted it on her naturalization certificate because "It s the only thing left from my parents I didn t want to change it"

Mrs Stoddart never forgets she has two names but what she learned when she first went back home after living here 7½ years was that when she is in Istanbul she is homesick for Lincoln and when she is in Lincoln she is homesick for Istanbul

Being homesick for a war-torn country is homesickness of a different sort She talks about it with little detail and with no self pity but it is apparent growing up was not particularly easy for her

Her grandparents were massacred Her father was in the army and her mother raised Anoush and her two sisters by herself

Mrs Stoddart's birth certificate lists the year of her birth as 1936 instead of 1938 because she was five before her mother got the certificate and by changing the date her mother could get an extra half a loaf of bread for them to eat

Mrs Stoddart doesn't remember playing outside in the summer because she always worked She began crocheting and knitting when she was five She made her first dress when she was nine without a pattern to follow, good training for the sewing work she did

"The biggest deal for girls in Turkey is that they should know cooking and sewing," she said

Blind skiers
'If you can conquer a mountain . . .'

Lincoln, N H (UPI) — Mimi Winer stood at the top of Loon Mountain The ski coach behind her yelled "go, go, go!" And down Mimi went to the foot of the mountain

Mimi Winer is blind

She is 47, a mother of three, a housewife, a painter until she lost her sight, and the woman who brought BOLD, the blind outdoor leisure development program East two years ago from its home base at Aspen, Colo

When the eastern program premiered with four people at Smuggler s Notch in Jeffersonville, Vt last winter, one woman told her, "This is the most exciting thing that's happened to me in the three years I ve been blind Here I am at the top of the mountain totally blind and skiing" The woman never had skied when she was sighted

You get so much courage from it you go on to other things' Mrs Winer said 'You know if you can conquer a mountain you can conquer many other things that come up in your life'

She was at Loon Mountain with Nelia Sargent, 21, Claremont, N H for the first of a series of persons to be taught how to ski blind at Loon's expense

Miss Sargent, who went blind three years ago and is beginning to earn a living caning and rushing chairs, had skied before Because she is legally blind, not totally blind, and is able to distinguish some objects, she still is able to do some cross country skiing alone in the woods

Mrs Winer also is legally rather than totally blind and when her youngest son Mathew, 19, goes with her, can go skiing

'Nelia has taken to it beautifully We started with the bunny slopes and we moved right up to the advanced intermediate trials her second day on skis," said instructor Linda Hickey, 28, wife of Loon's technical director

Mrs Hickey attended a special clinic last year for instructors of blind skiers, in which the instructors had to ski blindfolded so they would know just how their pupils felt and would react to various situations

"Loon's program is starting on a very small scale, one person per month, a week at a time, because we've never done it before," she said Food, lodging, equipment and an ever-present ski instructor are provided free by Loon

"One person said to me, 'I'm glad to see they're getting them out of the closet'," Mrs Winer reported "Another person got so upset he went shooting off into the woods

First set of wheels could be the start of something big

By Debie Murphy

Your first set of wheels . . . It doesn't matter that it's two, that it's human-powered rather than horse-powered or that it doesn't have a roof. Buying a bicycle requires the same type of finesse that buying a car does.

Any prospective buyer going into a bike shop today will be greeted by rows and rows of two-wheelers equipped with a myriad of gear shifts, brake systems, derailleur mechanisms and colors.

What you want to do is pick a bike out of that myriad that best serves what you plan to use the bike for and at the same time pleases your pocketbook.

Ken Stevens, owner of Mr. Bike, advises the first time biker to check a publication such as Consumer Reports before buying to see what models in different price ranges have to offer. Consumer publications often rate models as to performance, frequency of repair and potential problems.

Next, decide what you will use the bike for. Darrell Brenneise, owner of Freewheelin' Bike Shop, says for children the heavier, wide tire, coaster brake bikes are good. "A heavy bike is good for kids because it slows them down some so they aren't tearing around the streets."

For pleasure riding or for occasional use as transportation, however, a lightweight, three-speed is usually all that would be required in Lincoln, both Stevens and Brenneise advise. On the average, such a bike will cost between $115-$150.

"If you're not touring or in a hurry, you can get by with a three-speed mainly because there are few hills in Lincoln a biker has to contend with," said Stevens.

Also, a three-speed is usually less expensive than its five- and ten-speed counterparts. The extra speeds are often used for ease in pedaling nearly effortlessly up inclines.

Any good dealer will help the prospective customer analyze his bike needs. The type of bike you want to buy will depend on your age, whether you have handled a bike before, and whether its primary use will be for transportation or recreation, added Mike Lawlor of Lawlors.

Then it's just a matter of matching up a model to suit the customer's purposes.

Once you've determined the major use of your soon-to-be purchased bike, the next thing the buyer's attention should turn to is the frame.

Most bike store owners agreed that a lugged frame is preferable to a welded one. With a lugged frame, the different sections look like they are fitted into one another instead of joined together solely with welding material.

Electronically forged frames also are considered a good buy, says Lawlor.

"Welded frames are usually found on heavyweight bikes and aren't as flexible. A rider doesn't get jolted quite so badly going over bumps with a lugged frame," said Stevens.

getting started

Also, a lighter bike is easier to pedal. "If the bike feels like a smooth extension of the rider he'll probably use it more. What you want from a bike is efficiency," explained Brenneise.

He added that often welded frames can come apart at the joints sooner than a lugged frame would.

Also, the experts agree that the best frames are usually made of a chrome alloy in seamless tubing. Brenneise said by running your fingers over the bike's frame you can tell the smooth alloy from the slightly rougher, heavier metal frames.

Getting one that suits your body size is also a necessary consideration. Brenneise said the rider should be able to straddle the bike, put both feet on the ground and raise the bike as high as it will go. There should be an inch or more between the bottom of the bike tire and the ground.

"You won't enjoy riding a bike if it's the wrong size," said Lincoln Schwinn Cyclery owner Mrs. Donald Hill.

Five- and ten-speed gear systems only come equipped with caliper brakes. A coaster brake is not possible with this type of gear system. Center-pull caliper brakes are considered preferable to side-pull, Stevens said, so check out the brake system on the bike.

Bike experts agree that caliper brakes are best for the "speed" bikes because they provide needed braking power when whizzing down hills at frentic speeds. However, in wet weather, some caution must be taken in riding.

Racing handle bars (resembling curved rams horns) may seem awkward at first, but they are more efficient and comfortable since they distribute body weight more evenly over the bike.

If the handlebars don't seem appealing, many dealers can have regular handlebars substituted for the customer.

Another consideration is buying a bike that is already assembled, said Mrs. Hill. Not only does an assembled bike save a lot of frustration for the buyer in trying to put it together, but it is also safer.

"A bike that isn't put together properly may endanger the rider especially if something like the brakes are not working properly," she explained.

Most customers aren't able to properly set up speed bikes, agreed Lawlor, so the dealer should provide the customer with an assembled two-wheeler.

The bike dealers said the prospective customer also should check:

- Guarantees. Guarantees vary from manufacturer to manufacturer. Often, if the buyer shops around, he can get a comparable bike with a better guarantee than another bike he was interested in.

- Service. Stevens said to check for reputation and reliability in a dealer and if the shop will be able to service the bike. "Some dealers offer periodic check-ups free, for example," he explained. While parts for foreign bikes are not impossible to get for most shop owners, check to make sure that the parts can't be gotten only from one source.

Mrs. Hill recommended that a brand name bike be purchased so if the buyer moves to another part of the country it can be serviced by a local dealer.

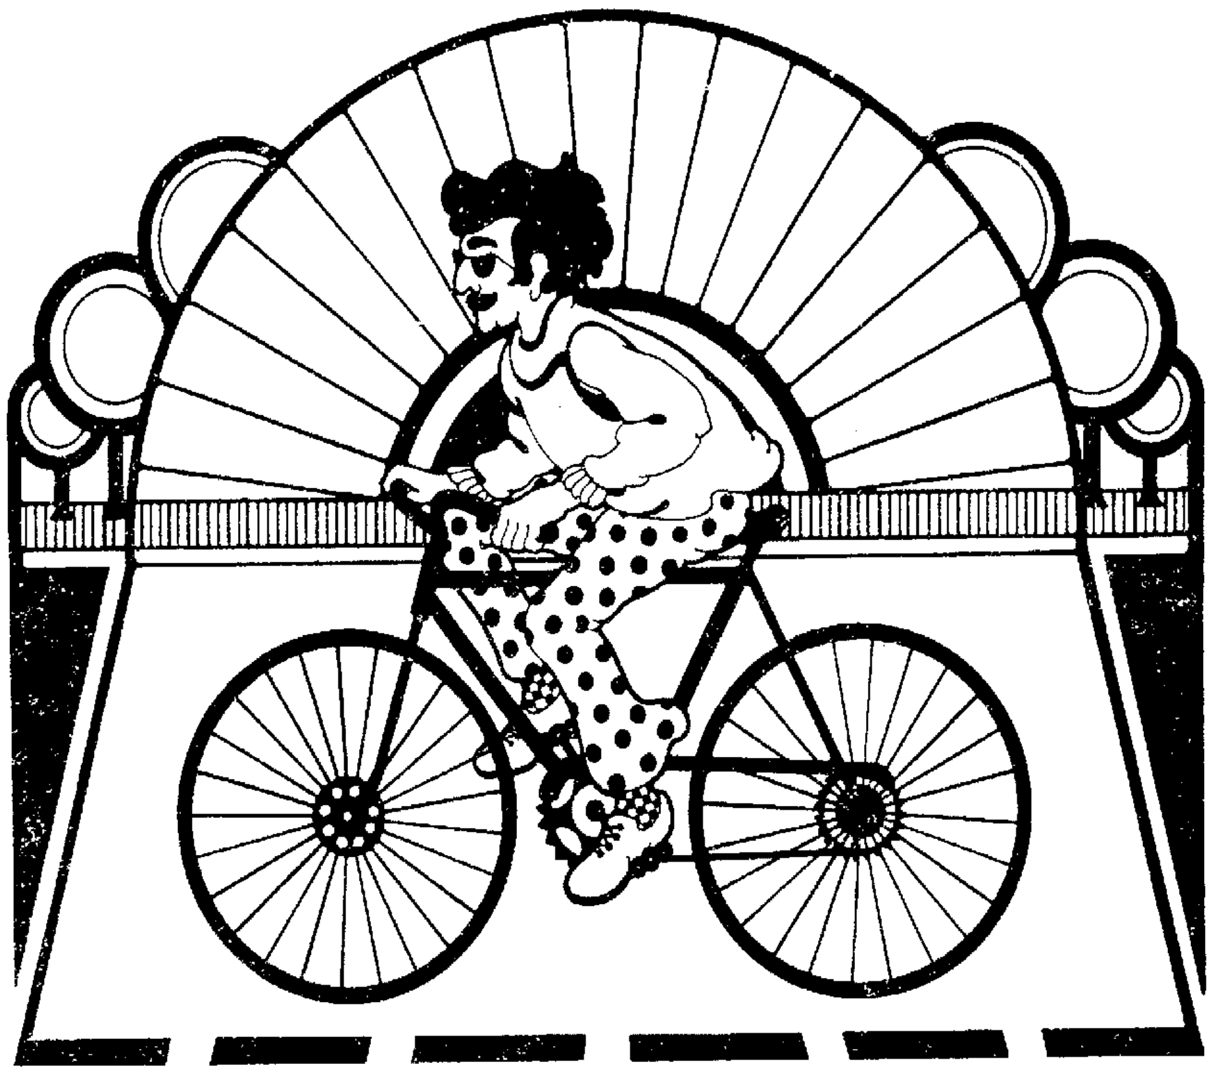
As far as bike accessories, the five- and ten-speed bikes usually come with no racks or baskets to hold anything the biker might carry.

So bike dealers suggest lightweight packs to either strap to the bike or to the biker for carrying around essentials.

Brenneise advocates the front bike pack for around town since it keeps most of the weight over the front end of the bike.

However, panniers or saddle bags that fit over the back end of the bike also are popular.

Backpacks also can keep the biker's hands free for steering.



Two-wheeler price ranges

With the variety of bicycles available in Lincoln, you can virtually spend as much or as little as you want for your two-wheeler.

Under $100 — Generally a one-speed, coaster brake, wide tire bike is what you'll be able to buy for less than $100. However, some of the more inexpensive speed bikes can occasionally be found in this price range.

For $100-$200 — Generally for short, in town trips, the customer can find a bike in this range that will provide easy riding and be fairly dependable. Usually models in this price range weigh between 25 and 35 pounds.

For $200-$300 — Bikes in this category are usually a little lighter — about 21-25 pounds — and of a better quality and workmanship.

For $300-$500 — The lightweights — 20-24 pounds. Usually considered the ultimate in bicycles.

For $500 and over — In this range, the customer will be getting into the custom built category.

Some PTAs losing their grip; membership down

By Jack Kennedy

The Parent-Teachers Assn (PTA), historic home base for fun nights, teacher teas, anti-violence and pro-school lunch campaigns is losing its grip on some schools

Lefler Junior High School s PTA will vote March 9 on whether to go it alone, foresaking its national ties for a local parent-teacher organization

There have been other defectors from the ranks in recent years Nebraska Congress of Parents and Teachers head Mrs Norman Stewart Lincoln, acknowledges

She believes the slippage has bottomed out and aggressive programs such as the current nationwide drive against TV violence, may get the organization moving again

Some local units and the Lincoln PTA council have neither participated in that campaign actively or publicized local meetings however Others have failed to distribute questionnaires which the state PTA office is promoting on the violence issue Mrs Stewart says "perhaps leadership and programs haven't been all that good "

There are about 218 PTA units in the state This is down 4% from the previous year, she said, but is the smallest drop in about four years New units are being formed often in small towns

Lincoln had 24 PTA member units in 1975-76 Beattie Elementary dropped out in 1975 Sheridan Elementary in 1976 Rousseau Elementary opened in 1964 with a purely local group Pound Junior High voted in recent years to retain PTA affiliation

Lefler s board voted to dissolve the PTA ties Members at large will vote March 9 said co presidents David and Lucy Buntain Some complain that 60¢ of the $1 50 local dues goes to the state and 20¢ to the national office There is virtually no secondary PTA state program they say and they want to work on local concerns

Those against withdrawal cite PTA successes in holding down school lunch costs publications and lobbying for state legislation

The national PTA congress office in Chicago is so concerned about its losses it just issued a "Why PTA Instead of PTO' booklet to promote its national impact service and training Mrs Stewart sees more action since the national PTA dropped its historic ban against interference with administrators That clause she said, was a good copout for units which did nothing

Go ahead serve it

Dear Ann Landers My sister-in law considers herself an authority on every subject I was in her home last Friday and she asked me for the 20th time if I would like a cup of tea She has a habit of doing that and it has always irritated me I decided to speak up

I explained that a hostess isn t supposed to ask a guest if she wants something — she s supposed to go ahead and serve it My sister in law claims some people don t want refreshments and it s dumb to go ahead and serve Who is right?

An Asker

Dear Asker The hostess who asks puts the burden on the guest This is impolite

Dear Ann Landers I wish I had been sitting at your typewriter to answer the woman who said she was suspicious of her sister and husband because they played gin rummy a lot while she was at work Hubby worked the night shift and Wifey worked days so Sis came over every afternoon to watch the kids and start supper

Don t you know a woman s intuition is the most infallible lie detector on earth? For years I felt guilty because of my ugly feelings about my dear sister and my wonderful husband They played a lot of gin rummy My kids were around too — also my mother plus other family members I fed myself the same bunk about how nice it was that we were such a close family To make a long story short my sister and my husband ended up together and I ended up reading your column

Bridge

Dear Mr Corn Rubber bridge both vulnerable Left hand opponent opens one diamond partner doubles and South responds one heart Doubler rebids one spade and South passes This goes down and doubler insists that South should have rebid hearts (North had only a four card spade suit)

This was South s hand Any comments regarding North s free lessons?

Answer I would have raised to two spades instead of passing and I would have gone set more! Your partner s rebid over your minimum response was obviously misguided When one makes a take out double and then bids over a non-forcing response the doubler announces a strong hand (more than a minimum double) and a good suit

Dear Mr Corn We held this hand at our weekly meeting and we don t know how to get to the correct contract There are more than enough points for a slam but how do you make it?

Twenty Questions
Visalia Calif

Answer A tough bidding problem and most pairs would reach a major suit slam down one or two because of the unavoidable spade losers The best contract is six diamonds which can be made without the lead of the spade ace and a heart shift Against this defense, North wins the heart in dummy and cashes the diamond ace However, he cannot get to his hand to draw trumps without establishing the setting trick for East

A tough hand and lots of tough luck It proves that not all slams can make

Dear Mr Corn: What is a false card?

Masked Marvel
Detroit

Answer A deceptive play of playing some card other than the "normal" card with the intent to deceive an opponent

Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

Monday, Feb. 28

Your birthday today: Your main aim now should be to unify what you've accumulated to date so you can improve, manage it more easily. Social moves, creative enterprises expand as you phase out old ways of doing things. Relationships grow stronger. Today's natives show ability in drama, music, poetry, frequently are emotionally detached, impersonal.

Aries (March 21-April 19): Business, public relations are good. Past differences flare up in your personal world, find you unsure what to do. Readjust taxes, insurances, shared finances.

Taurus (April 20-May 20): Friends help your enterprises with introductions, contacts, their own participation. Keep a steady course, avoid overdoing. Expect some form of overtime.

Gemini (May 21-June 20): Speak candidly of your intentions. People who seldom pay attention listen now. A new job or venture is favored.

Cancer (June 21-July 22): Personal gain is at stake. Put on a good show. Try to meet people higher up in your field, either in distant locations or slightly different specialities.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22): Call in loans of money, possessions, settle accounts. Little you say is taken as you mean it, no progress made persuading others to agree to your plans. Patience!

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Insist on paying your own way. Don't promise to do more for others than usual. Consultations prior to financial moves save many a dollar, future headaches.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Your bright idea is a guide line if you simply get busy. Sketch out goals so beautifully that others see themselves comfortably situated in your projection.

Scorpio (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Aim for better results with less involvement. More progress is made in the promotion than in the doing. Social action is expensive, few choices left open.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You're at a special turning point. Wind up old matters, get ready to launch new without bringing in extra complications. Go out for competitive games.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Instead of worrying, share problems and opportunity. Talk to higher-ups if possible. At your level, everybody is spoiling for a [illegible] energy!

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Ask all you deserve, never mind a lot of rivalry. [illegible] complex [illegible] must do [illegible] precaution [illegible]

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20): [illegible] changes carries on in your favor. Avoid extravagance, overindulgence, but make the most of advantages.

Many Nebraskans Climbing Branches of Family Trees

By Kathleen Conroy

Dedicated genealogists, or researchers of the family tree, always have spent many solitary hours poring over musty tomes or microfilm in the archives and deciphering old letters.

Genealogists still put in long hours with official records, but chances are they'll cross tracks with others who share this obsession for digging up the roots of the family tree.

The bicentennial spurred the recent interest in genealogy, says State Historical Society librarian Ann Reinert.

As she put it, people have become interested in history on a very personal level. "They began relating their own lives to the past," she said, "an entirely new idea for many."

Mrs. Beth Haring, who founded the Lincoln Genealogical Society with two friends a year ago, agreed. "For many of us, it became a personal bicentennial history project," she said. "If you find out one of your own ancestors was at the Battle of Bunker Hill or Bull Run, history has much more meaning.

"It's thrilling to realize your family actually existed in 1830, and very exciting to see your family name on those old records."

Many Nebraskans apparently are sharing this excitement. Mrs. Haring estimates her group's membership has grown from an initial 29 to about 145.

There are about 10 genealogical societies in the state. Groups members exchange information on how to use documents or whom to contact for information overseas.

"Even in small towns, people can order books and documents from the public or mobile library," she explained "Our group is Country singer Johnny Cash lives here on the shore of Old Hickory Lake near Hendersonville, Tenn. It's one of the most impressive homes on the Nashville bus tour.

Nashville Opulence

By Judith Kinnard

Nashville, Tenn. (AP) — It may not be as fancy as Beverly Hills or as opulent as Palm Springs, but country music is doing for Nashville what movies and money have done for the California towns It's dotting the country-side with pleasure domes

Tour buses ferry gawkers past 15 of the most impressive domiciles of the music makers, which are impressive by any standard, and there are others off the beaten path and even in the Tennessee hinterlands

Among the showier showplaces is Webb Pierce's He stood in his antique-crammed living room, a heavy Indian necklace cresting the wave in his stomach, and said

"When my wife Audry finds something she likes, I say, 'Buy it Just buy until you get ashamed of yourself' "

Guitar-Shaped Pool

That's the spirit behind some of Nashville's more remarkable architecture Pierce's own stone manor stands on 10 landscaped acres with tennis courts, formal gardens and a guitar-shaped swimming pool that set him back a cool $50,000

The Grand Ole Opry founded in 1925, was the magnet that drew the likes of Pierce to Nashville. The spinoff was more artists, recording studios, agents, money and people who feed off of it all.

The Nashville Chamber of Commerce says 6.3 million persons visit the city and its environs each year. One of the pioneers in peddling a peek at how the stars live was Agnes Pennington. She's been carting visitors on the music and mansion circuit for more than a quarter of a century and has parlayed the business into one of the city's largest tour outfits, one of more than 25 companies that hawk maps and three-hour tours for $7 50

But for the $7 50, Pierce is the only big star who welcomes tourists — and he got into trouble for it

Pierce, who lives in a quiet residential area south of town near Minnie Pearl's place and the Tennessee governor's mansion, not only welcomed sightseers, he was selling his albums at poolside. Neighbors got a court order banning such goings on He said he would quit selling records, but he wouldn't quit seeing people

Wynette Mansion

"I'll let the people continue to come up and look at what they gave me," he says "I want to give a little of it back to them "

Tammy Wynette also settled in this area of clipped green lawns and stately shade trees. Her $1 2 million mansion has 11 bedrooms, 15 baths, and a wine cellar.

Born Wynette Pugh the former Alabama hairdresser who made it to the top singing poignant songs about marital problems, got the mansion in the divorce settlement from her third husband, singer George Jones.

Many of the long-established country artists, such as Hank Snow, live in much smaller suburban neighborhoods. They've stayed where they originally settled, in the town of Madison which is easily accessible to the Grand Ole Opry

Kitty Wells, the Opry's first woman member lives in this neighborhood Her primary concessions to luxury are red velvet upholstery in the living room and an indoor swimming pool

Some stars like Del Reeves and Loretta Lynn, who owns the entire town of Hurricane Mills, Tenn , have settled into the rolling pasturelands of middle Tennessee

Half an hour south of Nashville in Williamson County, Tom T Hall and his wife Dixie live on a farm in a

Liv Ullmann

By Frances Taylor

(c) Newhouse Service

New York — Women are advancing in many areas of film-making, but in acting, American women are losing ground

There are few women stars

This year the New York Film Critics Circle gave its best actress award to Sweden's Liv Ullmann for the third time in less than 10 years American actresses were considered, but the Scandinavian star won the award for ' Face to Face, ' a movie about a woman's self-discovery An exciting film for a limited audience, ' Face to Face'' has been seen by worldwide audiences

The runner-up for best actress was Faye Dunaway for her role in "Network " one of the best movies of the year Others high in the vote were Sissy Spacek for 'Carrie" and Talia Shire for "Rocky "

The vote tells us a good deal about the status of actresses in todays movies Certainly Dunaway did a fine job as the ambitious executive in "Network " Spacek, a favorite with some critics, was adequate in "Carrie " And Talia Shire was excellent in "Rocky '

But few other films of the past year contained substantial female roles Action movies comprise a large percentage of American-made productions and there's little need for actresses in stories that consist of shoot-outs, chases and falling bodies

Spectacle and disaster movies also confine women s roles to a minor element

There were some satisfying performances by women last year out they have gone largely unnoticed Barbara Harris was a delight in Family Plot And Jodie Foster while still a teen-ager was impressive in "Taxi Driver ' There were Lee Grant in "Voyage of the Damned' and Ellen Greene in "Next Stop Greenwich Village "

The problem is that these are small roles, enjoyed while we watched each movie, but not large enough to remain in the memory

Whatever the reason, this is a danger sign We need screenplays that offer women the chance to stretch themselves as actresses The current system cannot supply apprenticeship for actresses — a way to learn and climb upward in their profession In television there is more opportunity and women are achieving stardom with audiences of tens of millions

That s good for the actresses and for the viewers but it is not promising for the future of the theater movies Let's hope the movies of 1977 will bring us more women in major movie roles

Review of 'Thieves': Disappointing movie

By Holly Spence

Filmdom would have done us a good turn by holding up the producers of "Thieves' (now showing at Plaza 3) and discarding it in the East River

This romantic comedy, set in Manhattan was taken from a Broadway play which dealt with a young couple in the throes of living loving and other difficult acts

The story is pathetically dated That is not to say it resembled Jeanette McDonald and Nelson Eddy crooning about the Royal Canadian Mounted Police or Busby Berkeley flanting his mad film style on us but the story of the 1960 s college marchers grown up and searching for their identity is old hat and furthermore boring

Talia Shire who is impressing audiences in Rocky once told an interviewer that "people are always impressed by hysteria — hysteria is easy It s the other stuff that s so hard to do Right on gal She should have been the consultant for Thieves

Pert Marlo Thomas and a good looking Charles Grodin scream and yell at each other with the force of 10 thousand exhaust fans What they say is about as exciting

This technique works quite well on television — with Maude and 'All s Fair' to name a couple — but when you get on the silver screen it looks like an actor on an ego trip The players stand and demand to be listened to

That is not to say that ' Thieves ' would rank as one of the 10 worst films of the year Call it disappointing Ms Thomas made television scores and ratings with her attractive ' That Girl Grodin and Irwin Corey (as Ms Thomas nutty taxi driving father) have done some admirable things What they all needed was a director but John Barry obviously wasn t the right one

The parts are ill-directed and the roles are ill-conceived overblown and overacted

The traumas of living in New York are not only not funny but they do not shock anyone now when it s tough living anywhere And if you want to chance the Big Apple that s your risk

The only character who seems to offer any sense at all in a dated non funny situation comedy (which surely would have been cancelled on TV) is Ann Wedgeworth as Nancy a siren of the night and unoccupied neighbor of Grodin the night Ms Thomas leaves him She seems to spout the only sense one is to come up with in Thieves PG

A recent off-Broadway smash by Mark Medoff, "When You Comin' Back, Red Ryder?" opens Friday at the University of Nebraska's Howell Theater, 12th and R. This third major production of the 1976-77 year for the University Theater will play at 8 p.m. Friday, Saturday and March 7-12.

Where have all the heroes gone? What has become of those courageous men who tamed the West and provided the raw material for countless melodramas? Medoff's play studies the vanishing of heroes in modern society.

Director and UNL faculty member Tice Miller said "the play shows us a new kind of American hero, one who rides a VW van instead of a horse. The main difference is that today's hero is not necessarily one of the good guys."

The setting is a small town in southern New Mexico about June of 1969, a time with Richard Nixon in the White House, talk of disagreement about Vietnam, news of college riots and student use of drugs. It's early Sunday morning and the place is a small diner on a highway recently bypassed by the newly-constructed Southern I-10

Into this quiet diner come Teddy, portrayed by George Hansen of Lincoln, and his girl friend Cheryl, played by Susan Troyer of Omaha, recently arrived in a VW van with California plates and looking to the locals like hippies.

Also enter Richard Ethredge, played by Randy Parker, a graduate student from Kearney, and Clarisse, his wife, played by Stephanie Kallos of Lincoln; two successful members of the upper middle class. Richard is a business executive and Clarisse a concert violinist. They are traveling from San Diego to New Orleans where Clarisse will play with the New Orleans Philharmonic Orchestra.

"Add the locals, and we have drama at its best," Miller said. "I think the playwright is trying to show that we've got to make our life work for us, by ourselves. We cannot depend on someone else to come in and save us. There are no heroes anymore"

The cast includes Jack Honor of Brooklyn, N.Y., portraying Stephen Ryder, a young tough of the late 50s style complete with tatoos, slick hair and ducktail; Loreda Shuster, a junior from Lincoln, playing Angel; Cliff Radcliff, from Waynesburg, Ohio, as Lyle Striker, owner of a nearby motel and filling station; and Eric Sorensen, of Omaha, as Clark, who runs the franchised diner.

The setting is by Bob Mond, faculty member; stage manager is Crys Craft, student from Omaha. Assistant to the director is Paula Langdon of Rockford, Ill. Costumes are by Julie Hagemeier of Beatrice.

NU School of Music Losing Good Friend

By Helen Haggie

Many people at the University of Nebraska School of Music feel they are losing a good friend as Gerhards Levalds leaves Lincoln to live with his son, Ulbis, near St. Louis.

The elder Levalds has lived in Lincoln since 1952 He left his native Latvia during World War II and spent time in Germany prior to coming here.

The slender man whose graying hair is thinning on top reminisced a bit during a visit to his immaculate Lincoln apartment, where he lives alone His daughter and son are married and have moved away. His wife died several years ago

"During peace time when I lived in Latvia, I played the violin with a small orchestra in a coffee house. We also played in movie houses We worked every day from 5 p m to midnight except Good Friday and Christmas Eve Those were the only two holidays we had There were no such things as weekends "

When Levalds was in Estonia (another Baltic land adjacent to Latvia) in 1915, an older man who, Levalds later discovered, was Johann Virus, founder of the Estonia Operetta, visited the one-room apartment where Levalts lived

"He said, 'I was told there is a boy here who plays the violin.' I began to work in a small orchestra, just 10 musicians, he directed. It was the first time I had played with a real orchestra. We played at least six hours every day, and on Sundays 12 hours. It was a pretty big job for me at age 15."

As refugees, the Levaldses came from Germany to Lincoln in 1952 Though he brought his violin with him, he knew it was useless to try for a job as a musician. "I had no chance to play because I didn't have membership in the union," he explained. "Therefore it was out of the question."

For a month after his arrival here. Levalds worked for a poultry-egg concern. Then he went to the Notifier Co. where he worked until retiring in 1970.

For some time he played his violin a little, "to keep my fingers in shape," he relates. "We lived in a second floor apartment on Q St Then when my wife died I moved to a little apartment and didn't want to disturb the neighbors. I thought a violin is made to make people happy, to make melodies. And there it stood, mute, behind me in the corner "

So the violin was sold

But this was not to be the end of Levalds' interest in music. He attended concerts, the symphony orchestra performances and recitals in the Nebraska Union.

"After I retired, I took it easy. I started to attend events at Kimball Hall (on the University of Nebraska campus) I was introduced to some of the musicians and I am grateful and thankful for those good friends Those musicians who showed me sincerity and heartfulness."

Apparently the love was on both sides The students took Levalds to their homes and introduced him to many other musicians.

At concerts or recitals Levalds likes to have tickets in the second row because he likes to watch the eccentricities of the artists.

"I heard Isaac Stern play when he was here 20 or so years ago," Levalds remembers.

"When Susskind directs the St. Louis Orchestra, he makes faces to tell the members of certain orchestra sections what to do," Levalds says with a smile.

"When Ricci was here in September, I had a bad cough and I asked the usher if I could wait to be seated until after everyone else was seated. I didn't want to disturb the others, and I thought if I sat in the back, it would be better."

His wish was granted.

But it isn't only the artists who have won national reputations that Levalds likes to hear "I like to attend all concerts I like very much when young artist performs whether a singer, instrumentalist, dance or whatever. They all put their souls into their performances. It really comes from their hearts."

And when possible, Levalds attends student and faculty recitals at Kimball Hall.

The musician is camera shy, but proudly produced a print of a drawing an artist did of the small orchestra in which Levalds was playing The scene is a coffee shop in Latvia. Each musician received a print.

"I forgot when I came to bring my picture with me when I came to this country But I wrote the museum in Riga where the original is now and I received this copy. You may use it if you like," he explained to the interviewer.

It's like trying to draw blood from a turnip to get any information from Levalds concerning the courtly things he has done for students at the School of Music.

"No names please," he says. "Some of my young friends are still here. Others have finished their work at the University and now are elsewhere."

One of his friends says Levalds often will send flowers, boxes of candy, music boxes and figurines to performers giving recitals He also gathers together groups of students after a performance and takes them out for dinner or other treats.

"We will miss him when he moves to Missouri," says one student. "He is the most generous, kind individual I know."

O'Donnell Auditorium sculptures planned

O Donnell Auditorium on the Nebraska Wesleyan University campus will have something added come graduation time

A commission to do two sculptures has been given to Les Bruning of Bellevue. The sculptures will adorn the side walls of the auditorium. Installation will begin the first week of May.

A gift from Anita O'Donnell has made the brushed aluminum works possible. The auditorium in the Fine Arts Center is named in honor of Mrs O'Donnell's late husband, Thomas C

Bruning, a 1970, NWU graduate, is assistant professor of art at Bellevue College. While a student at Wesleyan, he won a sculpture commission for the lobby of the County-City Bldg in Lincoln He earned an MFA at Syracuse University He has had commissions for Valmont Industry at Valley, the Unitarian Church in Lincoln and the Wisner United Methodist Church.

The sculptures for O'Donnell Auditorium are to be about 18 by 24 feet According to Betty Wallace, head of the NWU art department, care has been taken in the design and installation plans to ensure that the auditorium's acoustical qualities will not be damaged

The similar sculptures will have subtle variations The works will carry the linear effect of the Cadwallader Organ pipes at the rear of the stage, as well as the walnut of the auditorium, Bruning said The cast and fabricated brushed aluminum will have a brown patina which relates to the wood. The pieces will be dotted with cast organic forms

"We think this will be a major art attraction, not only for Nebraska Wesleyan but for Lincoln," Mrs. Wallace said

The Historical Society and archives are dded advantages for Lincolnites doing enealogical research.

Although librarians don't have time to esearch information, they will suggest how o start the search and how to recognize aluable clues in the genealogical treasure unt.

"When people tell me they've exhausted ll the sources. I can always steer them in nother direction because there's no end to he sources." said Mrs. Reinert.

Determined genealogists soon become amiliar with assorted legal documents, such s birth, death and marriage certificates, and and estate records and military and pension documents. They also learn how to order nformation from such diverse sources as the National Archives in Washington, D.C., the mmigration and Naturalization Service and he Bureau of Vital Statistics.

The most logical place to start is at ome, with family Bibles, diaries and journals, record books, letters, clippings and hotos, Mrs. Reinert advised.

Some Lincoln genealogists take classes available through Southeast Community College (SCC) and the City Parks and Recreation Dept.

For the past three years, SCC's adult education program has offered senior citizen, beginning and advanced genealogy workshops three times a year. Eight or nine registered for each class this winter.

The Parks and Recreation Dept. has offered classes in basic genealogical research for a year and a half. Enrolments average 10 to 12. The course is not being taught right now, but the next one begins in March.

There's no such formula for success in tracing ancestors, but without persistence the family historian has little chance of going past the birth-death entries in the family Bible.

"People often get discouraged if they don't find anything in the first place they look," Mrs. Reinert said. "Those who have the most success are willing to find just the right bit of information to fill in one piece of the puzzle and then go on searching."

One hundred fifty original drawings by the late Thomas Hart Benton will hang there through April 2. This premiere show for the new gallery includes Benton's work from the 1930's and 40's in sepia, pen and ink, watercolor and crayon.

Three accompanying films, the late 30's versions of "Huckleberry Finn" and "Tom Sawyer" along with a film on Benton's last mural, completed a week before his death in 1975, will accompany the art show.

Love-Larson Opera House is near the site being cleared by razing of the Pathfinder, which was rendered untenable by a gas explosion that killed 18 Fremont residents on Jan. 10, 1976. The opera building suffered minor damage in the blast.

Shakespeare's 'As You Like It' given modern setting at Doane

Crete — The Doane College players will produce William Shakespeare's "As You Like It" March 10-12. Director Charles Railsback says that the play has modern relevance for people with young minds. This idea is embodied in the dominant theme: the great universal love. The love explored between all characters includes serious romantic love, physical love, filial love and self righteous love.

A highlight of this Shakespearean event is Doane's March 12 drama conference with a visit by Mme. Suria Saint-Denis, consultant director of the drama division at the Juilliard School in New York.

Lead roles of Rosalind and Orlando in Doane's production are to be played by a brother-sister team — Kathryn and Peter Katt, daughter and son of Rev. and Mrs. Bruce Katt of Aurora.

Doane's interpretation of the play is a "modern" one, set in the present age. Railsback said All performances will be held in the campus auditorium. Curtains rise at 8 nightly with a 1:30 p.m. matinee for high schools added on the 11th.

Promoting Children's Literature

The National Endowment for the Humanities has awarded a $104,088 education grant to Simmons College in Boston to establish a Center for the Study of Children's Literature. The joint announcement of the first large-scale grant awarded by the endowment in the field of children's literature was made by Dr. William E. Russell of the endowment and President William J. Holmes of Simmons College.

The grant will be used to establish a three-fold project: a graduate program leading to a Master of Arts degree in children's literature; a program of colloquia, seminars and summer institutes; and a community literature education program.

Course work leading to the master's degree will begin in the fall of 1977. The curriculum will include such courses as "The History of American Children's Literature," "Themes and Protagonists in Modern Fantasy," "Victorian Children's Literature" and "Folklore and the Oral Tradition." In addition, an intensive writing course will encourage creative work in the field.

Colloquia, seminars and summer institutes will permit professors and students in English and American literature to meet persons teaching and working in children's literature.

The community programs, to be given by the center in cooperation with neighboring institutions, will offer lectures, performances and forums dealing with issues in children's literature to teachers, librarians and the general public. These activities will be designed to establish the Center for the Study of Children's Literature as an important resource for organizing and synthesizing community literature education.

Under the direction of Barbara Harrison, assistant professor of education, the center will promote children's literature as a necessary and legitimate area of academic pursuit. By providing learning and training opportunities to prospective teachers, librarians, editors and publishers, the center will enhance the quality of the literary experience which children receive.

The center will begin its formal program on July 5 with a three-week institute on "The Contemporary World of Children's Literature." The institute may be attended for credit or may be audited by teachers, librarians, students or the general public.

Clowns as Extensions of Ourselves

By Denise De Clue

Woe are we: Ronald McDonald and Bozo, with their empty clown faces and their empty clown clothes, are just about the only clowns most people know.

Is that all there is? Weird-looking guys with trained dogs prancing around the circus track? They make us slightly ill at ease — they're pitifully boorish and unfunny — and they're poor but distant cousins to the glorious clowns of yesteryear.

John H. Towsen, a professional clown who studied at Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey's Clown College and teaches clowning in the East, has written a fascinating book about the ups and downs, somersaults and pratfalls of clowns through the ages.

The reader will be struck with the marvelous persistence of clowns through all sorts of censorship and adversity, their magical appearance in almost every culture and their characteristic mastery of the most difficult physical feats.

Clowns and fools and jesters have been rediscovered perpetually by society because, says Towsen, they meet compelling human needs. Often they entertain us by identifying and challenging attitudes we didn't even know we had. And they thrill us with extraordinary contortions and acrobatics, reminding us that human bodies are capable of much more than we thought possible. Mentally and physically and socially, clowns go further than they're supposed to go.

Consider the Hopi Indian chuku' wimkya clowns, who for centuries have goofed up the annual holy fertility dance of the kachinas (gods of fertility). Smeared with mud, wearing painted faces and wigs made from stocking caps and rabbit fur, they tumble off a roof and join the somber kachina dancers.

Showing little respect for the holiness of the occasion, they form their own line alongside the kachinas, dancing out of step and even chanting irreverent parodies of the kachina songs.

But part of the ceremony calls for the clowns to participate seriously in the sacred ritual of sprinkling the dancers with cornmeal and exchanging gifts with the audience. Their role seems to make accessible the ritual, to remove it from the realm of gods and give it back to the people.

Clowns and fools characteristically have represented the common man, the naive and stupid outsider we're all glad we're not. Sometimes the clown or fool is seen as the inspired madman or spiritual prophet whose perceptions, unrestrained by conventional logic, illuminate human experience.

"While the real fool, the village idiot, may merely be an object of pity," Towsen writes, "the performer who can present the fool's perceptions in a socially acceptable manner often proves quite popular — even if everything he stands for runs counter to prevailing beliefs."

A father-son clown team from Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus.

Clowning and improvisation once were thought to stem from the commedia dell'arte troupes of 16th Century Italy. But Towsen chronicles a richer history of clowning, including Dorian wiseacres of 400 B.C., clans and societies of "delight makers" among North American Indians, ancient clowns in Sanskrit dramas and blasphemous clerical clowns in the Middle Ages.

Towsen introduces us to the zanies and mountebanks of the Middle Ages, inspirations for Shakespeare's comic characters. We see how the clown prevailed through the closing of English theaters by the Puritans, the licensing of theaters in France and the restrictions against speaking clowns, which led to enchanting monologs and pantomine.

We meet the subtle and otherworldly Pierrot characterized by Jean-Gaspard Deburau in the 1830s, the death-defying Auriol, the Birdman of Paris, the hilarious Price Brothers, the Hanlons and the Fratellini Brothers, flamboyant Dan Rice, an American clown and circus entrepreneur, and more than a hundred other magnificent tumblers, jugglers, equestrians, rope dancers, wire walkers, acrobats, mimes, musicians, tramps, Shakespearean elocutionists and masters of improvisation.

We gain a better sense of where Chaplin came from, and W.C. Fields and Marcel Marceau and the Marx Brothers.

And we're left with wistful appreciation of clowns and a sadness that now they hardly ever have the stage to themselves.

The Joy of Being Indian

The Names: A Memoir. By N Scott Momaday, Harper & Row

Scott Momaday won a Pulitzer Prize in 1968 for House Made of Dawn. Americans then were at the peak of nostalgia for things Indian: some might say that for white Americans, at least, this was a falsely sentimental craze. Publishers brought out splendid volumes on the original Americans, and Indian jewelry and design were fashionable.

As with all passions, the madness is gone now, and the avant-garde is barking up another tree. But for those who wish it, there continue to be new sources of information on who the Indian really was.

Momaday's The Names is a memoir that is highly personal and beautiful, but because its form is innovative, it is uneven. Here we can learn about being Indian, but we are not told how. Rather, we are expected to wrap ourselves in an Indian's skin and become a Kiowa. All literature asks for an act of faith from the reader, but this little book is more demanding than most.

Momaday's tribe is Kiowa, which believes that it came into the world with difficulty through a hollow log. This fable seems directly related to human birth, and yet it also could be a primordial memory of the arduous crossing of the Bering Strait. Ancestral ties are what his memoir is all about, and Momaday's genealogy, with both white and Indian forebears, is more complicated than most.

His book is a peculiar patchwork of Indian stories, poems, incantations in italics, the lives of his parents and grandparents and his own memories of growing up. There is a poetical rhythm as if one were riding bareback on an Indian pony. The pony moves from trot to gallop to walk; if you fall off, it is jarring, but if you ease into the rhythm, you can travel far.

Momaday is telling something larger than his own history or even that of his people. He is saying that for us, the brotherhood of human beings, roots are more important than material possessions. Pride comes from knowing who you are, and it is ironic that the melting pot of America, that ideal of democracy, could work against this pride and produce a nation of rootless peoples.

Human dignity is preserved in pride, a sense of self that can be indestructible in adversity. It is not just black Americans who, like Alex Haley in his best-selling Roots, need to trace their names to find their identity. All of us are in a sense uprooted if we do not know our forebears and carry them within us.

Momaday's book is very uneven. Some readers may resist the breaks in the patterns, the flights of imagination or even the family history. Other readers will find here a celebration of being human and a lesson from the old Indians in dignity and pride.

Each person is important. Each of us could (if only we had Momaday's talent) write a memoir of value such as this.

The Old Man's Darling. By Allan Turpin; Coward, McCann & Geoghegan.

In preliberation days, a marriage-minded woman had two choices: she could become an old man's darling or a young man's slave.

Frank Chappie was a fairly wealthy man of 70 who convinced himself he looked 50. After his second wife died, he married Dorothy, a handsome woman of 35 who was enamored of his money.

Later she became enamored of her driving instructor, and their affair drove Frank to commit suicide.

The pain she caused Frank was justified, the narrator believes, because of the law of retribution: the pain you give others you get back in kind.

In his younger days, Frank was a cad and cheated openly on his first wife, hurting her greatly. Dorothy became involved with a cad much like Frank was.

Thus does life come full circle in Allan Turpin's book.

But the moral of the story isn't the whole story. This tightly written drama of the suburbs also gives an insightful look at English lifestyles in the 1930s. Cars and television were becoming common. The pressure to keep up with the Joneses was ever present. The isolation of the suburbs, especially for women, was becoming evident. The suburbanite's disdain of other ways of living already was well entrenched.

This sometimes morbidly fascinating tale was written without extraneous word or thought but is carefully constructed to lead you to Turpin's thoughts about life. It treats sex and violence with great delicacy and without overt description.

The Old Man's Darling is not fast paced and action packed. It is a thinking person's book.

Ground was broken May 28, 1874, for a United States Post Office on the block between O and P, 9th and 10th, once known as Market Square. Early construction is shown here against a background of Lincoln's skyline of the 1870s. (The old Capitol may be seen at upper left.) The post office was completed in 1879 at a cost of nearly $200,000.

Prior to this a number of places had housed the Lincoln post office. In 1865, when it was still Lancaster village a homesteader named Jacob Dawson handled the mail in a building near today's 10th and O For a brief period the post office was at 9th and O. In 1871 it was located at 11th and O, then it moved across the street. The next move was to a frame building on the site of the present Journal-Star Bldg. at 9th and P. The post office was again moved, this time to the Hallo Theater Bldg. on the southwest corner of 12th and O. After the theater burned in 1876 (the mail was saved) the post office reopened on O Street between 9th and 10th across the street from the site of the building shown under construction here. Upon its completion the post office remained here a number of years.

In 1906, after a new post office building was completed in the same block, the city took steps to utilize the 1879 building as a city hall, and it is "Old City Hall" today.

But there was one more post office move to the new main building, completed in 1970 at 7th and R Streets (Nebraska State Historical Society Photo)

Now he has a house full of antiques bought on shopping trips to England Upstairs is a bathroom with a sunken tub as big as a wading pool A limousine is parked out front, and at the foot of the hill is Hall's 16-track recording studio, the Toybox

Hall denies his lifestyle has changed much.

"Dixie doesn't have any diamonds and the limo is just for business," he said

A small cluster of homes also lines the shores of Old Hickory Lake, north of Nashville in Hendersonville Here Johnny Cash rubs elbows with neighbors Roy Orbison and Bob Luman.

Cash found his dream house on an afternoon outing when he spotted an unfinished structure. He talked the builder, who planned it for his own family, into a sale. The builder, Braxton Dixon, has been cashing in on the stars ever since, with most of his houses variations of Cash's. Prices range from $150,000 to about $500,000.

Cash's home is pure Tennessee, with native limestone, rough poplar timbers and barn boards, all built on a solid strata of rock From the air, it resembles a tape deck — two two-story "reels" linked by a 130-foot central living area which Cash says gave him plenty of room to walk off those sleepless nights of the old days

He has added a second level and is building a six-car garage A security guard patrols the estate, which has two swimming pools, tennis courts and terraced gardens

Down the road, Orbison lives in a huge wood and stone A-frame hidden by a tall fence. Luman's large log house stretches diagonally across a wooded lot

Across the road is Cash's motehr, Mrs Ray Cash. She keeps the living room lights on and the drapes open 24 hours a day to display the gold record her son gave her.

TV Execs Looking For Good Western

By Mike Goodkind

Los Angeles (AP) — Television Westerns may not be headed for the last roundup, but right now they look about as dead as a Bad Guy dropped to the dusty street by a bullet.

Some TV executives in these parts seem to be hankerin' for a hero, maybe with some partners or sidekicks, to show to the folks every week instead of an occasional special or mini-series which has done well.

"I wish we could come up with a good Western," said Bill Self, programming vice president at CBS. "I think there is a place for Westerns, and we have some thoughts for next year"

But John J McMahon, an NBC programming vice president, says, "As far as an ongoing series, it seems to be a longshot chance that it will work."

Western buffs almost weep with nostalgia at the mention of the late 1950s, when as many as 39 Westerns rode the tube each week. But little by little they bit the dust, often in favor of police or detective adventures.

The rebirth of the Western could be echoing through the canyons with the success of the first two of a three-part historical epic branded "How the West Was Won." The program was produced by John Mantley, who produced the last 11 years of "Gunsmoke", and starred James Arness—the Matt Dillon of "Gunsmoke." The first episode, Feb. 6, was the most watched show of the week, says A.C. Nielsen, the ratings folks.

An ABC spokesman says success like that can't go unnoticed. But Brandon Stoddard, a programming vice president for the network, says "We tend to lean on the idea of continuing it as a two-hour" show aired occasionally, rather than as a weekly series.

The last stab at a regular series, NBC's "The Quest," was a tale of two young men in search of their sister captured by the Indians The series collapsed in mid-season

"The Quest" tried unsuccessfully to avoid one of the pitfalls plaguing Westerns — featuring characters in their 20s in an attempt to appeal to young'uns. Programs such as "Gunsmoke" which ran 20 years until 1975 traditionally drew the bulk of their audience from the over-50 age group. Oldsters buy less than young people, and advertisers don't like that

Louis L'Amour, who has written nearly 70 successful Western novels, and Norm Macdonnell, who produced the first nine years of TV's "Gunsmoke" and the radio version before that, criticize many of the newer programs, particularly those which dwell on contemporary themes set out West or those which delve into the psychology of the cowboy or gunslinger.

"Hunger, thirst, cold, revenge, these things are what make the Western," says L'Amour.

The first years of "Gunsmoke" were set a half-hour and Macdonnell believes the shorter time slot helped avoid some pitfalls

"A lot of perfectly good 'Virginians' which Macdonnell also produced went down the tubes because we went too much into the whys and wherefores and didn't get into the emotional interplay," Macdonnell says.

"In a television show you need . . . characters with whom the audience has empathy," says Mantley.

'Man From Atlantis' was crazy fun for actress

By Holly Spence

Belinda Montgomery

Belinda Montgomery has been getting a few pointers at home for her appearance in "The Man From Atlantis," airing at 8 p.m. Friday on NBC ③ C 5.

Ms. Montgomery stars as a doctor who saves the life of the water-breathing "Man from Atlantis" (Patrick Duffy), and she happens to have a boy friend who is a doctor.

She said in a phone interview from Los Angeles that her beau "is into a lot of preventive medicine" and has been a convenient research source for the show.

The two-hour film is a science fiction adventure about an alien from the ocean, deposited on a Pacific Coast beach after a storm.

Freelance actress Montgomery has been on stage since she turned 8 in her native Winnipeg, Man.

Now in her mid-20's, Ms. Montgomery has to portray a doctor in her 30's for her part in "The Man From Atlantis." Because she has always looked so young this role "is a way for me to get away from it — I'm playing against the age factor," she said

Dr Elizabeth Merill is "a very feeling type of woman," she added. An authoritative figure in the two-hour NBC movie, "I'm calling all the shots," she continued.

Patrick Duffy

She called "The Man from Atlantis" a kind of "crazy fun" with a set "so grandiose and big" Ms Montgomery spent a couple of hours just looking at all the buttons and gadgets

Although some work with dolphins was done in "impressive looking" tanks, most of the location work was done on the old Esther Williams stage, she said.

She thinks the idea of this pilot just might click "because people are interested in the mysterious"

"People can be entertained by it," she said. "It is not terribly heavy dramatic material"

Even though some of the story ideas are "bizarre," she noted with pleasure that "the script is so different from the cops and robbers types of things"

"It gets all the juices going," she chirped "And that's what acting is all about"

But acting is not the only thing in her busy life. Ms Montgomery has been designing children's clothes since she was 16 and did a documentary on ecology which gave her a new interest in writing and producing That picture meant five or six days, in Colorado with a film crew

"I didn't know what I was doing," she said. "It was a great venture, a crash course in film"

The call to Hollywood came when she was 18 and touring Canada in "Boeing, Boeing" Ms Montgomery thought a phone call beckoning her west was joke and "I was very blase" She had been seen on an educational program by Universal Studios people

Since her move, she's not been out of work. Ms Montgomery "likes the fast pace of television" but admitted the quick script changes are sometimes frustrating.

She hopes to work toward motion picture work — "movies are a luxury" — where there is time to work on and discuss characters.

'Previn, the Pittsburgh' celebrate in series

The glitter of a 50th anniversary surrounds the Pittsburgh Symphony and its glamorous new music director, Andre Previn

Sharing the celebration will be public television viewers via "Previn and the Pittsburgh," a series of eight specials which will take somewhat unorthodox views of classical music. The series will play on consecutive Sundays beginning today at 7 p m on KUON-TV, Channel 12, and repeat at 11 p m Thursday

For the sixth consecutive year, the Pittsburgh Symphony season is sold out on series-subscription sales even before the first concert

Previn, who brings his own unique talent and prestige to the orchestra, has created excitement among music lovers In his first season at Pittsburgh Previn also continues as principal conductor of the London Symphony and is committed to guest conducting a number of other orchestras both in the United States and Europe

Andre Previn in rehearsal with Pittsburgh Symphony.

Previn said he hopes to further the symphony's tradition and to build a closer relationship between orchestra and public, and especially to win more of the young as part of the audience

"I'm astonished that people ask me why I chose Pittsburgh but I chose the orchestra," he said. "It is one of the six in the U.S with an international reputation If all goes as planned, I would love to be able to take this orchestra anywhere in the world

"Bringing the orchestra to national television in this series of programs is one step in bringing great music to the mass public We will also make some recordings, the Pittsburgh's first in eight years."

The Chicago Symphony Orchestra is making only its second TV appearance in more than 25 years "(Georg) Solti Conducts Wagner" samples the richly romantic orchestral music from four of Richard Wagner's most popular operas ETV 12C13 Tuesday at 7 p.m.

Sport Goods

By Joe Cappo

(c) 1977 Chicago Daily News

Chicago — ABC Television, has sold a lot of commercial time to advertisers in past years, but now the network is making the ultimate sale

ABC (Always Be Commercial?) has put its very name on the block, and an aggressive marketing company has snapped it up

Later this year a line of sporting goods will be marketed under the ABC's Wide World of Sports brand name The move is aimed at capitalizing on the popularity of the network's long-running sports series

loyalties Will Flow to ABC

And it figures that anyone who can find nothing better to do on a Saturday afternoon than watch demolition derby and wrist wrestling would probably leap at the chance to buy a hockey puck with his favorite program s name on it

The sporting goods line will be made by Crown Recreation, a subsidiary of Ideal Toy Corp which is renowned for its success in selling toys through heavy television advertising

Herbert R Sand, group president of Ideal and chairman of Crown, said ABC will get royalties for every piece of merchandise sold The network s initials as well as the Wide World of Sports trademark will appear on all of the products

According to Sand, ABC will put its imprimatur on the item if " the product is equal to or better than any competitive product at the same price That sounds nice but if a product weren t competitively manufactured and priced it would be ignored anyway

The products include tennis rackets basketballs soccer and volley balls table tennis sets tether ball sets and darts and dartboards Sand said the company will concentrate on "manufacturing sporting goods for the family We re not interested in team sports

Don t expect to see any advertising for the sporting goods line on the Wide World of Sports program The Federal Communications Commission has made the program off limits for Crown because in Sand s words, it would be a 90-minute commercial for our products Good ole FCC

Power-Packed '300' Production Limited

"VA-ROOM!" Here's a power-packed beauty of the mid-'50s (the era of the great horsepower race) With 300 h.p., the Chrysler "300" series (introduced in January of 1955) topped its rivals for a brief time. Initial models were all two-door hardtops.

All 1955 Chrysler Corp. cars were newly restyled with "The Forward Look," and 1955 was a most prosperous year for nearly all auto manufacturers, with all new-styling from most of them. Panoramic windshields, three-tone color schemes and hot new V-8 engines were offered by many makes

Only 1,000 of the 1955 "300s" were initially planned, but the car was well received and more than 1,700 were built that year For 1956, the new model had more horsepower and was known as the "300-B," and the letter suffixes continued each year until the "300L" of 1965. (There was no "300-I," but in '63 the letter suffix skipped to "J." The '63 was the scarcest, as only 400 of those were produced.' Most plentiful was the "300-K" of 1964, with 3,647 built.

First "300" convertible was the "300-C" of 1957; the hardtops continued as before. There were no "300" convertibles in '63.

Kids' Growing Years Worth Pictures

By Bill Baughman

(c) Chicago Sun-Times

Now is the time to start planning to take enough snapshots of your children to make up a good photo album of their growing-up days

Besides a general picture album which records the whole family's activities from vacations to holidays to special highlights such as graduations and marriages, keep an album for each child with only his or her pictures in it

If you go at it right, kids love to have their pictures taken, providing they are not required to be washed, combed, sweetly smiling —/or worst of all, still.

If you force them to pose, the results can range from artificial, unnatural smiles to sullen, downright grumpy expressions.

When you photograph kids busily and happily engaged in doing something they enjoy, you will reap photographs which show them true to life. Expressions will be natural and more appealing. There may be a few dirty faces, the clothes may be rumpled, their antics uninhibited from time to time, but all these aspects will make the pictures more endearing down through the years

If all else fails on a day when you are trying for candid, unposed shots, try for some face-making close-ups.

If you are going to be able to shoot fast enough to capture shifts in expression, be sure you have a camera which allows you to shoot without time-consuming adjustments

One suggestion when shooting candid or unposed shots. You may want to take two or three shots instead of one. There is a chance of movement when you take close-ups. Hold your camera still (squeeze, don't punch the shutter button!); look for relatively peak expressions when the subject is moving less.

Keep an extra roll of film in the house in case you want to shoot several shots as insurance for getting one really good shot When you do get a really sharp picture of a youngster, consider having it enlarged to take up a whole page in your album. Try each year for a happy smiling shot on each birthday anniversary.

Try for more unposed snapshots through the growing-up years. These treasures will be enjoyed for years to come Casual pictures are often the more endearing ones.

Ancient Coins Inspire New

By Leon Lindheim

Special Writer

Many modern coin designers look back into history for their inspirations. The complete set of Israel coins of 1949 were copied from designs that appeared on coins used in Judaea during the Second Revolt (135 A.D.) — the palm tree on the 100 prutah, the vine leaf on the 50 prutah, a bunch of grapes on the 25 prutah and an amphora on the 10 prutah. The Italian 10-lira piece of 1946 pictures the winged horse, Pegasus, as did the ancient gold stater of Syracuse, struck in the 4th century B.C Even the United States Mercury Head dime (1916-1945) was copied from the Roman denarius of about 200 B.C.

Supply and Demand

Q: How are coin prices dtermined? G.

A: For the run-of-the-mill coins, many dealers are competing for the retail business of their customers, so the normal law of supply and demand prevails. Rarities generally are sold at auction, and it is possible to have a great disparity between the selling prices of two similar coins sold, even within a short time of each other.

With one coin available at the moment and two millionaires bidding for it, that particular coin could realize for its seller many times its true worth.

Yeoman's Handbook

The 1977 "Blue Book" is out. This 34th edition of Richard S. Yeoman's "Handbook of United States Coins" is the most commonly accepted catalog of wholesale prices of U.S. coins from 1793 to the present. Publisher is Western Publishing Co.

Coin Questions And Answers

Q. I tried to complete a set of portraits of English rulers from Queen Elizabeth I to the present, as pictured on coins, but am told that none were made during the reign of Edward VIII.

A. This is true It is reported that Britain did strike coins, but remelted them when Edward abdicated in favor of Wally Simpson. A single specimen of a 3-pence piece with Edward VIII's profile was pictured and reported in Seaby's Coin and Medal Bulletin of February, 1954, so possibly a few escaped the melting pot and do exist somewhere

Q. I have a U.S. dollar bill, Series 1935-A. On the front "HAWAII" is printed on both ends. It also appears across the back of the bill. What does it commemorate?

A. A whole series of notes, issued after the attack on Pearl Harbor, are referred to as "emergency notes." The $5, $10 and $20 notes were issued through the Federal Reserve Bank of San Francisco, while the $1 note was the common silver certificate All had the overprinting "HAWAII," as you noted To further distinguish them, all use a brown treasury department seal (normally the $1 would carry a blue seal and the others a green seal)

These notes commemorated nothing and were engraved with the thought that, should the Japanese overrun the islands, this overprinted currency could be readily identified

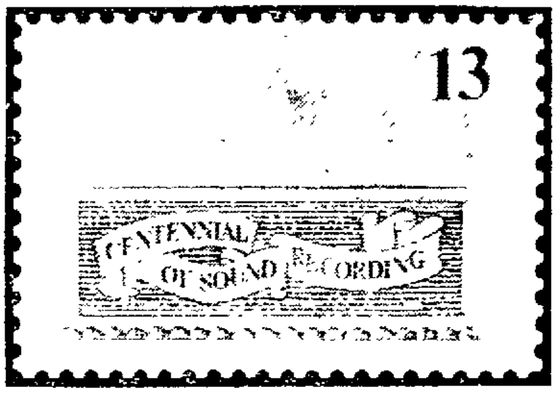
Recognize Century of Recording

A 13-cent commemorative stamp marking a century of progress in sound recording will be issued on March 23 in Washington, D.C., during the annual cultural award dinner of the Recording Industries of America, Inc. The stamp points to the dramatic developments in recording techniques and equipment evolving from the earliest tin foil machine to today's sophisticated records and tapes.



The designer was Walter Einsel of Westport, Conn., who teamed with his wife, Naiad, in 1973 to design four U.S. stamps marking Progress in Electronics. The sound recording stamp, depicting a stylized concept of early recording equipment, is similar in design concept to the electronics stamps.

The horizontal stamp is the standard commemorative size of 1.44 x 0.84 inches or 36.5 x 21 [illegible] millimeters. The stamps [illegible] by the offset intaglio method and there will be 50 stamps per pane. There will be one plate number per pane.

Procedures for ordering first day of issue cancellations follow.

• Customers affixing stamps. Customers may purchase their own stamps at their local post office and affix them to their own envelopes. All envelopes must be addressed and peelable return address labels are recommended for this purpose. Stamps must be affixed in the upper right corner of envelopes approximately ¼ inch from the top and ¼ inch from the right edge. Return addresses should be placed low and well to the left and a filler of postal card thickness should be inserted in each cover. Not later than April 7, (orders must be postmarked by that date), the envelopes may be forwarded to "First Day Cancellations, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20013" for cancellation and return through the mail stream. No remittance is required.

• Postal Service affixing stamps. Except for affixing stamps and addressing orders, follow the procedures listed above. Address orders to "Sound Recording Stamp, Postmaster, Washington, DC 20013." The cost is 13 cents per stamp to be affixed to covers. Do not send cash. Personal checks will be accepted as remittance for orders up to 200 covers. Remittance for larger amounts should be made by money order or cashier's check. Postage stamps are unacceptable as payment. Uncle can't do much for Yank abroad, in trouble

By William Hines

(c) 1977 Chicago Sun-Times

Washington — You are standing on a street corner in a foreign city, waiting for a taxi perhaps, or wondering when your wife will show up, when suddenly you feel the heavy hand of officialdom on your shoulder and hear a voice saying ominously, "You will come vit me, pliss."

What do you do now — or more to the point, what does your friendly and helpful U S. representative overseas do for you?

Not as much as you might expect or hope, and if your troubles are less serious than involvement with the police, assistance from the American authorities on the scene may be hardly worth mentioning.

The jails of foreign countries — notably Mexico, where some 600 gringos are languishing in durance — are full of Americans who think that their constitutional rights have been violated.

Well, they haven't. The American citizen's rights travel with him just as far as the borders of Uncle Sam's dominions and not a millimeter farther. If you are pinched in a foreign country, U.S. officials will do what they can to help you, but what they can do may not be much.

There are a lot of untoward things short of landing in the hoosegow that can befall a traveler abroad. In event of almost any of them the traveler's first point of contact with American authority should be the nearest consul. Consuls are quasi-diplomatic officials charged with handling everyday business dealings in which Americans are involved.

The State Department published a little brochure entitled, "Your Trip Abroad," which summarizes the things consuls can and can't do. That list appears in a box accompanying this story.

If you are going abroad it might be a good idea to get the locations and telephone numbers of U S. consulates and consulates general in the countries you are going to visit. The Passport Office, Department of State, Washington D.C. 20524, can give you this information.

One of the most common travel emergencies abroad is loss of money or airplane tickets. The traveler who faces this problem will find his or her Uncle Sam to be a most parismonious old party. The government does not give or lend money to stranded travelers, nor does it advance money for passage home.

About the best the consul can do for you is help you draft a cable that will be sent to friends or relatives back home — collect. If they don't respond with a money order — prepaid — well, that is tough.

If you lose your passport, the consul can get you a replacement (for a fee) but only after he satisfies himself that you really lost it and aren't a stateless person trying to sneak into America or a person who left his passport as security for something and is now trying to welsh.

Sick? The consul will help you get to a hospital and will give you a list of reliable doctors (English-speaking if possible) but won't pay the bill.

If you or someone traveling with you should — God forbid! die, Uncle Sam does give his consular officials authority to send a prepaid telegram to next-of-kin informing them of the death and inquiring as to desires to internment abroad or shipment of remains home. The whole tab, above the cost of the telegram, is next-of-kin's responsibility.

Ideally, consular officials will give a helping hand to the sick or a shoulder for the bereaved to cry on, but in practice this depends pretty much on the personality of the individual official and the circumstances that the distraught traveler finds himself in.

Strange things — by American standards — happen in other countries, and one of the consul's greatest values to the traveler is in explaining odd customs and regulations so they make sense. If property belonging to you is seized, for example, the consul can either explain why, find out why if he doesn't know, or make discreet inquiries that may result in your getting your property back.

But when the consul deals with the "host government" in your behalf, it is always with the thought in mind that local laws prevail. You don't carry your constitutional rights with you when you go, say, to Ruritania.

U.S. authorities try harder to help citizens who are arrested for "crimes" that would not be offenses under American law than they do in the case of those charged with U.S. — recognized infractions like burglary, assault and dope-dealing. But even for people charged with harboring improper thoughts or speaking against the regime, the most the consul can do — in the words of one officials here — is "try to mediate the problem and get a practical, pragmatic solution."

Of course, the consul can't help you if you cannot notify him, and not all foreign governments observe the niceties of prompt arraignment and the one free telephone call. In In Mexico, for example, you can be detained for up to a year without being sentenced.

If the consul hears about you, he's supposed to get in touch with you, give you the name of a lawyer — but no money to pay him! — and to make follow-up visits at intervals of at least a month. But again, he can do this only if the local government permits.

What a Consul Can and Can't Do

Here's what you can — and can't — expect from a United States consul if you run into problems abroad, according to a pamphlet on foreign travel published by the State Dept.:

Consuls Can and Will:

- Request emergency assistance for Americans who are sick, injured, or stranded:
- Visit Americans in trouble and provide names of local attorneys and doctors:
- Insist that Americans receive equal treatment under foreign laws:
- Contact relatives or friends for funds:
- Help locate missing Americans;
- Aid Americans during local civil unrest or natural disaster.

Consuls Can't and Won't:

- Give or lend money or cash personal checks:
- Do the work of a travel agent:
- Arrange free medical or legal service:
- Provide bail or get you out of jail.

Bamberg, Germany, Mirrors Centuries

By Howard Fenstemaker

(c) Chicago Daily News

Bamberg, Germany — This Bavarian city observed its bicentennial eight years before King John of England signed the Magna Carta.

It was nearly 500 years old when Columbus discovered America Virtually untouched by the dozens of wars that have swirled around it. Bamberg is a treasurehouse of art, architecture and culture dating back to early medieval times.

Three short visits to this picturesque town straddling the River Regnitz have been too few to absorb its full story. Here are a few of its attractions, which have made it a popular tourist destination for Germans, although strangely enough relatively few Americans are ever seen here.

Situated on and among seven hills, Bamberg has a skyline that reflects its strongly religious roots. Atop each hill is a church, the two most prominent being the unusual four-spired cathedral and St. Michael's Church, expanded from a Benedictine abbey founded in 1015.

1237 Cathedral

The cathedral, or Dom, was built in its present form in 1237, with an unusual blend of two architectural styles, one of which was in vogue when construction began, with the other coming into fashion while the work was in progress. Beneath one pair of spires at the east, the stonework is heavy Romanesque, the opposite end is pure Gothic and the transition between the two is imperceptible. Each end of the nave has its own altar.

— The famed Bamberg Rider, an exquisite life-sized stone carving of an unidentified knight astride a smooth gray horse, sculptured about 1230 by an unknown master artist and set high in the wall to the left of the east altar.

— A magnificent altarpiece carved in wood by Viet Stoss in 1523, depicting the nativity of Christ.

Imperial Palace

Clustered around the cathedral square are buildings typifying architecture from the 11th to the 18th centuries, the oldest being the Alte Hofhastung, the former imperial palace. Also in the group are the Renaissance building that new houses the Bamberg History Museum and the New Residence, built between 1697 and 1703

St. Michael's Church, on a neighboring hill, among other things, offers a nave ceiling on which are painted 600 different medicinal herbs, an enclosed cloister that creates superb acoustics for a choral group standing on the church steps, and an outside terrace that provides one of the best views of the red-tiled roofs of old Bamberg.

River Building

One of the most unusual town halls in Germany is found here -- in the river. In the 13th Century, when the bishops of Bamberg held a stranglehold on the town's land, they permitted no construction of governmental buildings on the church's land. The local officials responded by building an island in Regnitz and putting their town hall on it.

Two pairs of bridges connect the building, now in disuse, with the river banks.

The official founding date of the city is placed at 1007, when a bishopric was established. But evidence of settlers as far back as the Late Stone Age has been found here. It was an important trading center and military post of the Roman Empire Since the 19th century it was become industrialized, has expanded eastward from the old city and now has a population of more than 75,000.

French families host paying guests

United Press International

Unless you have friends or relatives abroad, chances are invitations to visit private homes will be hard to come by. Yet there is probably no better way to sample the culture and life style of another country. Why not consider staying in a French family's home as a paying house guest?

A New York-based service called Chez des Amis will make the necessary arrangements. Current rates range from $14 to $22.50 a person daily, double occupancy, for a minumum stay of five days.

The present roster lists more than 100 families in every region of France and from almost all walks of life.

All are personally selected and visited regularly by Chez des Amis partners. Evelyne Jankowski, formerly of Lille, France, and Judith Haber, a native New Yorker who describes herslef as a "hopeless Francophile."

"The French homes are chosen for the personalities of the hosts, the quality and comfort of the accommodations and the hosts' knowledge of their region and life style," said Mrs. Haber.

For example, there is Mme. Boyat, a professor of English and American civilization and culture at two universities in Paris. She lives with her daughter, an international patent attorney, in an antiques-filled appartment in a fashionable district of Parthen.

There are the Count and Countess of Blois who live near Le Creusot, Saone et Loire, in a 15th-century chateau.

The countess, who writes for a decorating and antiques magazine, is also an experienced guide for the Burgundy and Loire regions. There are riding stables and tennis courts nearby and swimming and boating.

"Savoring the French cuisine en famille may be one of the best reasons for staying in a French home," said Mlle. Jankowski. "Many of the hosts are excellent cooks specializing in the cuisine of their regions, and all offer dinner, including wine, at between $6 and $9 a person."

All prospective clients are inteviewed in person or by telephone.

Mata Hari Recognized

Her home town of Leeuwarden, The Netherlands, has erected this monument to the famous courtesan, Mata Hari, who was executed in 1917 by the French on conviction of being a spy for the Germans during World War I. Controversy still surrounds her arrest, conviction and execution. But, whatever the truth, Leeuwarden in one of the most puritan parts of Europe, has at last recognized her as a daughter and is cashing in on any tourism the new monument may bring.

Credit May Take Many Forms

By Dr. Arthur Kraft
Professor of Management UNL
SUN Faculty Consultant

Establishing credit is an important activity of all business organizations. Credit may be extended by one firm to another firm or by a firm to an individual. Firms want to avoid losses when they extend credit so they carefully screen all credit applications and will only grant credit to those firms and individuals who have a history of paying their bills.

Firms extend credit in order to maximize sales. Thus potential customers will be able to purchase goods and services and pay for them at a later day when it is more convenient. If a firm does not grant credit, potential customers may take their business elsewhere.

To make sure that customers granted credit will pay their debts firms often check on the credit worthiness of these customers. In general the credit worthiness may depend on the ability of the credit applicant to pay back previous loans and financial obligations. If the credit applicant is another business firm the management ability of the firm the amount of capital it possesses and the current state of the economy may be important.

All of these factors will determine whether credit should be extended to the applicant and the amount of credit extended. If the applicant appears to be a good risk a considerable amount of credit may be extended. Once a business firm extends credit it is important that it makes sure these debts are collected after an adequate period of time has passed. This will avoid potential losses and will insure an adequate flow of funds into the firm.

As mentioned earlier credit may also be extended to individuals as well as business firms. When credit is extended to individuals it is called consumer credit.

Credit is extended to individuals under a number of circumstances and it may take a variety of forms. One form may have the consumer pay for all purchases within a specified period of time.

An alternative form would have repayment take place over an extended period with fractional amounts being paid at specified points in time. The latter arrangement is referred to as purchasing on the installment plan.

In addition to business firms extending credit to their customers there are a number of other organizations which act as a source of credit. This group includes both the bank and non-bank credit card companies such as Master Charge BankAmericard and American Express.

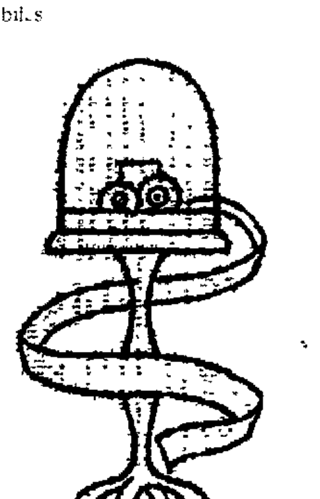
This approach is popular with business firms because they receive prompt payment, bear no risk of extending credit and avoid the overhead costs associated with maintaining credit facilities. The business firm however must pay the credit card agency a certain percentage of the value of the sale as a commission for the risk the agency bears. The credit card agency will also charge interest to the card holder if the charged amount is not repaid to the agency within a specific period of time usually thirty days.

There are also sales finance firms which finance purchases of various durable goods such as automobiles, appliances and various types of equipment. These organizations aid business firms by assuming the credit risk and the overhead cost associated with extending credit. The sales finance organization usually buys the customer installment contract from the seller of the item rather than making loans directly to the purchaser.

Consumer finance agencies differ from sales finance organizations in that they make loans directly to individuals. Such loans which are not very large usually require little collateral as security for the loan. These loans are for varying periods of time and are frequently paid in installments. Consumer finance companies charge higher rates of interest than most financial institutions because they bear higher risks and their loans are of relatively short duration.

Another source of credit is a credit union which is a financial company organized under law by individuals who have a common bond. They may work for the same firm, live in the same neighborhood belong to the same union. Credit union members save at the credit union and earn interest on their funds.

In addition the credit union grants loans to its members at relatively low rates of interest. A normal rate of interest would be one per cent a month on the unpaid balance. Such loans are usually small and are made to purchase items such as appliances and automobiles.



Commercial banks also participate in the process of extending credit to individuals. They will lend money to consumers to purchase automobiles appliances and other consumer durable goods. Besides granting loans commercial banks provide a number of other services such as accepting demand and time deposits.

Demand deposits which are checking accounts may be withdrawn by the individual at any time without giving prior notice to the bank. Time deposits on the other hand earn interest and are savings accounts. The bank has the right to require thirty days notice before any funds may be withdrawn. This requirement however is rarely enforced.

The loan services of a bank fall into two categories commercial and personal loans. Commercial loans are granted for business ventures. These loans provide commercial banks with most of their revenue and are usually granted for periods of less than one year. Such loans may be secured by real or personal property, or they may be unsecured loans which are based only on the goodwill and financial reliability of the business firm.

When a business firm borrows funds from a bank on a regular basis the firm is said to establish a line of credit with the bank. Under this arrangement, the business may borrow funds up to a prescribed borrowing limit without any difficulty.

Commercial banks also provide certified checks. A certified check written on a commercial bank guarantees that there are sufficient funds available in the check holder's account to cover the amount of the check. In fact, the amount of the check is withdrawn from the check holder's account and held in a special account until the certified check is returned.

Commercial banks will provide payroll service for a depositor. The bank will prepare the payroll checks mail and issue them. They will also cash such checks. The bank will also receive payroll checks of depositors and deposit them in the personal checking account of the depositor. The bank will handle Social Security and related checks in a similar fashion.

Commercial banks fall into two major categories those which are federally chartered called national banks and those which are chartered by states called state banks. All national banks and many of the state banks are members of the Federal Reserve System. While more than half of all banks are not members of the Federal Reserve System these nonmember banks hold only about twenty per cent of the total of all bank deposits.

The Federal Reserve System was established by Congress in the Federal Reserve Act of 1913. It is managed by the Board of Governors which is composed of seven members who are appointed by the President for fourteen year terms.

The United States is divided into twelve Federal Reserve districts. Each district has a Federal Reserve Bank and an associated number of Federal Reserve branch banks. The Federal Reserve System is set up to control and coordinate the commercial banks. In addition it has the responsibility to regulate credit and control the supply of money. These latter responsibilities are used to maintain economic growth and price stability in the economy.

The Federal Reserve System is owned by its member banks and operates in the public interest with its responsibility to Congress and the American public. It seeks to maintain price stability and economic growth in a number of ways.

The Federal Reserve System determines the amount of cash reserves that its member banks must maintain. Reserves are the fraction of deposits that banks do not loan out. Banks keep these reserves to meet the withdrawal demands of their depositors.

The primary function of the reserve requirement is to allow the Federal Reserve System, or the "Fed" as it is commonly called to control the amount of deposits that member banks may lend to borrowers. By increasing the reserve requirements the Fed reduces the amount of money that member banks have available for loans and investments. Such action has a deflationary effect on the economy. A decrease in the reserve requirement has an opposite effect. Since it expands the amount of money for making a loan it has a stimulating effect on the economy.

At the close of every business day the member banks are required to have cash reserves sufficient to meet the legal reserve requirements of the Fed. If these cash reserve requirements are not met the member bank is prohibited from issuing new loans.

To meet the reserve requirement the member banks may borrow from the Federal Reserve System. The member banks pay a charge, called the discount rate, for borrowing such funds. The discount rate is equivalent to an interest rate except that the cost is deducted in advance from the loan. Thus, the member bank will receive the loan minus the discount cost of borrowing the funds.

Member banks may profitably borrow funds from the Fed and then subsequently make loans to their customers because the discount rate is less than the interest they charge their customers. The Fed can control the economy by raising or lowering the discount rate. If the economy must be stimulated the Fed may lower the discount rate. This will decrease the cost to member banks of borrowing from the Fed, so they will be able to expand loans and thereby stimulate the economy.

The Fed carries out open market operations by selling or buying government securities mostly bonds. Such actions will increase or decrease the reserves of member banks. This is the single most important action the Fed may take to stabilize the economy.

When the Fed buys securities new deposits and reserves are created and additional money is put into circulation. This has an expansional effect on the economy. The sale of government securities on the other hand has a restricting effect on the economy because it takes money out of circulation and decreases the supply of money.

All member banks of the Federal Reserve System and most of the Commercial banks as a whole have their deposits insured by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation (FDIC). Each deposit is insured up to $40 000.

The purpose of such insurance is to instill confidence in the banking system. Investors may deposit their money without fear of losing the funds should the bank fail. If the bank fails the FDIC takes control of the bank and returns each depositor's account up to $40,000. Banks who participate in the FDIC plan pay an annual fee for such insurance based on the amount of their deposits.
